We Go Up 14 Miles
Why German Steel?
The President Sees War
A Cash Bonus, Maybe?

Officers of the American Air Corps, Captains A. W. Stevens and Orvil Anderson, rose above the earth into the stratosphere yesterday to a height greater than any human being had ever reached, with the possible exception, of course, of Elijah going up in his chariot of fire.

They did not go higher, but broke all records.

Seventy-four thousand one hundred and eighty-seven feet is more than fourteen miles, two thousand feet higher than the unofficial Russian record of 72,200 feet.

Fourteen miles seems very high to go in the ocean of air above us. But that air ocean, getting very "thin" toward the top, is 500 miles deep, and for a man to rise fourteen miles from the earth's surface is as though a deep sea fish should rise a few yards above the deepest bottom of the ocean.

We are only human "deep sea fish," living at the bottom of our air ocean. The real deep sea fish die before they reach the top of their ocean. Humans would die long before reaching fourteen miles up if they did not take up their own oxygen supply. Fish cannot do that.

It is actually true that spenders of taxpayers' money engaged in constructing New York's tri-borough bridge decided to buy steel for that IN GERMANY. A saving of money is involved, naturally, since wages in Germany are far below American wages.

BUT what about American workers and American wages? The government is spending thousands of millions giving work to the idle. Must it spend more millions in Germany to increase the number of unemployed in American steel mills?

AND do not those that would spend taxpayers' money to buy German steel know that they would thus give business approval to Chancellor Hitler's shameful and cowardly religious and racial persecution.

Will this country use taxpayers' money to build up German industry and supply funds to perpetuate a government based on cruelty, superstition and cowardice, under a dictator who is not a German?

It is bad enough to talk about holding the Olympic "sports" under the auspices of an autocrat, who shows himself a first-class coward and bully, a 100-to-1 hero. Must American dollars be contributed to uphold that personage, diverting to German workers employment and wages badly needed by idle workmen in this country?

President Roosevelt will doubtless have something to say in the matter. National funds are building that tri-borough bridge, which enables the President to make those in charge realize that this country does not want to finance Hitlerism.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced the early "consummation of a commercial agreement between Canada and the United States," referring to "our two peoples, each independent in themselves, closely knit by ties of blood and common heritage, with standards of life substantially the same."

At the same time, speaking in Arlington National Cemetery, the President warned the country that there is danger of war, urging "adequate defense on land, on sea, and in the air."

He knows, as does everybody, that defense first, on the air, and second, under the water, is most important.

To celebrate Armistice Day, James Van Zandt, head of Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Ray Murphy, of the American Legion, agreed to fight together for cash payment of the soldiers' bonus by next February.

If that comes, and it may, since we are getting near to November, 1936, and this is "no time for fooling," the ice jam of credit in the United States may be loosened.

Paying veterans their bonus in cash would undoubtedly mean printing the cash. It would be hard for even a goose-headed financier to suggest creating more billions of inflation bonds, when money printed for the bonus would be absorbed throughout the nation like a quart of water on the Sahara Desert.

We have inflation now, in the shape of bonds, and in cash that financial institutions are afraid to lend because they are not sure that anything is worth anything. A few billions of cash inflation would help that situation. And only fools would be afraid of American money. En-

'HELP BUSINESS' ROOSEVELT TELLS BANKERS

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE, Addressing the Eleventh Semi-Anniversalheting of the Business Organization of the Government, Washington, D. C., June 21, 1926,

"All of this effort in behalf of economy would not be worth while unless it had an ultimate purpose above and beyond the mere saving of money. We ought to use money as we use any other utility—to advan the welfare of the human race. Money is not endowed with any sacred quality. Man was not made for money, but money was made for man."

MYSTERY BULLETS FATAL TO BRIDE IN WORCESTER

Payoffs Due in Four More Banks

COURT O. K.'S $438,000 IN YULE CASH

Payment of dividends about December 10 in four more closed state banks totalling $438,000 was approved by the Supreme Court, Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce announced this afternoon.

Releases affect these banks: Bancroft Trust of Worcester; Medford Trust, Belmont Trust and Plymouth Trust.

Releases have been made possible through continued liquidation of assets and in two cases borrowings from banks on securities held by the closed banks.

SUMS TO BE PAID

Dividend releases are as follows:

Belmont Trust Company—An additional 20 per cent of the remaining balance to the savings department depositors and 4 0 per cent of the remaining balance to the commercial department depositors. This present dividend will amount to approximately $135,000, and will make total releases to date to depositors in this bank of $734,000

Bancroft Trust Company — A first dividend in the commercial department of 10 per cent. With this release of approximately $3,000 the total amount of dividends paid in this bank to date will amount to $2,225,000.

TOTAL $1,800,000

Medford Trust Comp first dividend in the comm al department of 10 per cent. With this release of approximately $150,000 the total dividends in this bank to date will amount to approximately $1,500,000.

Plymouth County Trust Company, Brockton — A second dividend of 10 per cent to commercial department depositors. With $78,000 to be paid, the total dividends to date will amount to $1,833,000.

Roosevelt Plans Talk at Harvard

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Plans of President Roosevelt to attend the Harvard University tercentenary celebration September 18, 1936, were announced today by Jerome D. Greene, director of the celebration, after a call at the White House.

Greene said the President intended to talk that afternoon to the alumni of Harvard in a gathering on the University campus.

PWA Import Plans:

INDUSTRY FIGHTS USE OF NAZI STEEL

New York, Nov. 12 (INS)—While the Iron and Steel Institute was reported prepared to meet here today to discuss the situation, protests against the use of German-made steel in PWA projects continued to grow.

Protests were heard from city officials, labor leaders and congressmen.

The storm was precipitated by reports of PWA approval of a contract for German steel to be used in constructing the $65,000,000 TriBorough bridge, linking Manhattan, the Bronx and Queens.

Nathan Burkan, attorney, announced he would go before the TriBorough bridge authority, of which he is a member, today,

RAW DEAL HIT BY AMOSKEAG REPORT

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Concord, N. H., Nov. 12—Raw Deal legislation harassing the textile industry as a whole is a basic cause of the threatened liquidation of the Amoskeag Mills in Manchester, Governor H. Styles Bridges' textile committee reported today.

The threat of Amoskeag liquidation is not an idle one, the committee reported after an exhaustive study of the Manchester situation.

In an effort to avert liquidation which it predicted would be a "calamity of state-wide proportions," the committee recommended appointment of a unpaid temporary committee by the governor to bring about a meeting of Amoskeag workers and the management to pave the way for survival.

Conditions attributable to legislation of the Raw Deal were listed by the committee among principal causes of the decline of the textile

ROOSEVELT PLEADS FOR BUSINESS

New Orleans, Nov. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt wrote the American Bankers Association, in a letter read at the annual meeting here today, that "all banks are now in a strong position," and urged extension of credit to business, industry and real estate "on a sound basis."

"I hope they will take full advantage of the new banking act and provide credit when it can be done on a sound basis to business and industry and to real estate," wrote the President.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, read the letter, which follows:

"Please express to the members of the American Bankers Association in convention in the beautiful and historic city of New Orleans my very best wishes for a successful and profitable meeting.

"I have watched with great interest the continued improvement in banks throughout the country during the past two years, the progress which I reported to their convention last year is being maintained. Evidences of great recovery are at every hand.

"Bank portfolios and deposits reflect this.

"I am gratified, as I am sure every member of the American Bankers' Association is gratified, to know that all banks are now in a strong position, and I hope they will take full advantage of the new banking act and provide credit when it can be done upon a sound basis to business and industry and to real estate.

"I am convinced that with cooperation between banks, business, and government—and mutual confidence—we will soon alive our remaining problems.

"Very sincerely yours,
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

'Dick' Grant Gets $7000 Utility Job

Richard D. Grant, now his secretary, will be named as a member of the State Public Utilities Commission a week from tomorrow, Governor Curley said today.

The announcement confirmed the report published last Saturday in the Boston Evening American that Grant would be shifted into Wells' post.

Although Wells' term does not expire until December 1, Grant will serve out the unexpired term and then is expected to be reappointed to the $7000 post.

In answer to a question, Governor Curley said he will name Edmund Hoy, now first assistant secretary on the governor's staff, to take Grant's present job.

4 Men Arrested At Chelsea Polls

Four men were arrested on illegal voting charges in Chelsea today and Mayor Quigley immediately ordered Police Chief Finn to call all night policemen and reserves on duty at the polls.

The mayor ordered the chief to drive all strangers having no business in Chelsea outside the city limits.

Those arrested gave their names as Joseph Gicofsky, 28, of Willard street, Chelsea; James Lee, 39, of the Chelsea Soldiers' Home; Frank Gentile, 21, of Auburn street, and Dominick Bover, 23, of North street, both in Boston's North End.

Following the arrests, Mayor Quigley ordered that every police officer in the city be assigned to the polls.

DEATH COMES AS SECOND SHOT IS PROBED

Worcester, Nov. 12 — Within a few hours after police reopened investigation into yesterday's reported accidental shooting of Mrs. Mildred R. Army, 18, she died in Worcester City Hospital today.

Bride of an elopement five months ago, Mrs. Army was in a coma to the end and could not be questioned regarding her story, told immediately after the shooting, that she accidentally wounded herself while handling a .22 calibre revolver she did not know was loaded.

MYSTERY IN CASE

Puzzled by certain unusual aspects of the case, held by police to conflict with the theory of an accident, police laid all their gathered details before the medical examiner for final decision.

Discovery that two shots were fired from the weapon was one aspect of the case that puzzled the authorities.

Another is the fact that the weapon is of the old-style single-action type requiring four separate acts to discharge it twice.

The victim has only one wound and at first it was believed that the second bullet was missing, but X-rays showed that both bullets

U. S. NOTIFIED OF MUSSOLINI REPRISALS THREAT

LEAGUE NATIONS WARNED OF PENALTIES PROGRAM

Washington, Nov. 12 (US)—Protesting the "grave injustice" of proposed economic and financial boycotts, Italy sent individual notes to all sanctionist governments, implying that the League of Nations has been stampeded into its present course, and asking each government for its own "individual, sovereign intentions."

Reasoning and conciliatory in tenor, the communication contained seven carefully planned points, and imputed that if the League proceeds with its sanctions, Italy will be forced to resign.

A copy of the note was delivered to Undersecretary of State Phillips here by Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso. He made it plain, however, that it was only for the government's information, and that the contents do not apply to the United States.

GETS TRANSLATION

The transcript presented to Phillips was in Italian, but Rosso personally translated it into French. Later, at the embassy, he gave Universal Service a detailed summary of the communication. The highlights, in unofficial translation, are:

1—Denying any violation of Section XII of the League's covenant, the note charges that Italy's memoranda and arguments have never been duly considered by the League.

2—It argues that Italy's "emancipation" of Ethiopia is vindicated by the fact that "large Ethiopian populations headed by religious and civil authorities have put themselves under the protection of Italy." It points out that Article 22 of the covenant bans slavery, and that while the Addis Ababa government failed to do away with it, Italy has freed 16,000 slaves in occupied territory.

3—The note charges that the League has "applied the letter of the covenant, killing its spirit," has acted hastily, and challenges the legitimacy of the "co-ordination committee" which decided upon and planned the sanctions.

CONDEMNS EMBARGO

4—Italy declares that by levying an arms embargo on her, and lifting the embargo on Ethiopia, the League has aggravated the very situation which compelled Rome to take its "urgent measures of protection" for her African colonies.

5—Italy complains that economic sanctions never have been voted by the League in the past, although in former crises the combatant powers had made no attempt at amicable settlement prior to hostilities.

6—The note warns that Italy will be forced to retaliate against economic and financial sanctions, with the result that grave disruptions in the world economic system are likely.

7—The note concludes with the avowal that Italy, "until today" has remained in the League in the hope of avoiding a dangerous world situation, but feels now called upon to call to the attention of the "sanctionists" their individual responsibilities as sovereign states.

Italy Threatens to Quit League, Warns of Reprisals

Premier Mussolini's government also warned all nations participating in sanctions against her that such actions constitutes a "true act of hostility, which amply justifies inevitable Italian counter measures."

Italy, the document informed sanctionist nations, "has not wished until now to dissociate herself from the Geneva institution (the league) despite Italy's opposition to the procedure followed to her damage, because she desired to prevent a conflict, such as that now being considered, from leading to more vast complications."

Therefore Italy, the communication added, is "calling attention to the responsibility," in the sanctionist measures and the "gravity of their consequences."

The warning was set forth in a lengthy protest, identical copies of which were sent to the countries adhering to the Geneva proposals for action against Italy for its campaign of conquest in Ethiopia.

Copies were sent also to the United States, Germany and Japan, non-members of the league.

The protest, the text of which was made public here today, also demanded of the nations addressed information as to the nature of the measures they planned to take to make sanctions effective.

"The Italian government, while it has taken every disposition to prevent the situation thus created (by sanctions) from developing any further dangers, believes it to be its duty to call vigorously the attention of the governments of members of the League of Nations to the responsibility implied in the measures, in the course of application, and to the gravity of their consequences," the note said.

"The Italian government will be pleased to know in what way the governments involved intend in their free and sovereign character to conduct themselves in view of the restrictive measures proposed against Italy," the note concluded.

Rains Hold Up Battle, Addis Ababa Reports

Addis Ababa, Nov. 12 (AP)—A reliable source asserted today the first big battle of the Italo-Ethiopian war should take place on the northern front by the end of this week unless delayed by unseasonable rains.

This authority said the combat would be waged between the main Italian and Ethiopian armies in the north amid the mountains of Ethiopia's lower Tigre mountains.

Unexpected rains were falling both in the Tigre province and in Ogaden province on the southern front, reports said, before the capital dicloses.

While conceding that Ras Seyoum and Ras Kassa had been falling back with their large armies, in accordance with a definite strategic plan, confidantes of Emperor Haile Selassie said the northern commanders were seeking to join their troops with the better trained, better equipped forces from Addis Ababa.

British Envoy Seeks Peace Pact With Duce

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—Authoritative British sources said today it was inconceivable that Italian protests would affect application of League of Nations' sanctions against Italy on November 18.

It was stated the protest of Premier Mussolini would not affect conversations being held by Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, with Il Duce to remove the tension between Italy and Great Britain.

France and Britain Plan Similar Replies to Duce

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP)—Authoritative sources said today that France and Great Britain are drafting similar replies to Premier Mussolini's protest against League of Nations' sanctions.

It was indicated that both nations will maintain their stand for economic penalties against Italy.

ITALIANS FACE 537,000 FOES

Italian General Headquarters, Nov. 12 (AP)—The Ethiopians were reported by Italian scouts today to have armies of a quarter of a million warriors, with more than that in reserve, to oppose the Fascist invasion.

Before the Northern front, Ethiopian commanders were said to have 177,000 men. In the East were reported 40,000 warriors.

The Governor of Harar, objective of the drive from both North and South, was credited with 20,000, for a total of 237,000.

"To these should be added between 300,000 and 400,000 destined to reinforce sectors under attack and produce an encircling movement," said a published Italian report.

The forces in the North were described as divided with 500,000 under Ras Seyoum, 70,000 under Ras Kassa, 50,000 under Ras Imru and 7,000 in Emperor Haile Selassie's Imperial Guard.

Davis to Head Navy U. S. Parley Group

Washington, Nov. 12 (INS)—Norman H. Davis, America's roving "ambassador," will head the American delegation to the London naval conference.

President Roosevelt decided upon Davis to head the delegation following word that Great Britain intends to strive for a general agreement and that Japan is sending an imposing delegation.

TROLLEY CRASH INJURES 16 IN EVERETT

Fourteen men and two women were injured today in a collision of street cars at a crossover in Glendale square, Everett.

An Eastern Massachusetts car, proceeding in the for from Malden to Chelsea, cracked into the side of an Elevated trolley car crossing Ferry street at Broadway.

The "El" car was more than halfway across the intersection when the crash occurred.

Every window in it was broken, glass showering its 15 passengers.

The front vestibule of the Eastern Massachusetts car was folded like an accordion, its operator, J. J. McCarren, of 63 Central avenue, Revere, escaping injury by a near miracle.

Most severely injured was Alfred Gonsales, 36, of 521 Washington avenue, Revere, a passenger. He sustained fractured ribs.

The others injured, all of whom suffered cuts and bruises were:

BRUHMULLER, Miss Marion, 109 Eastern avenue, Malden.

BERGER, Harry, 66 Harvard street, Malden.

BURKE, Ernest, 554 Lynn street, Malden.

BRITISH READY IN EGYPT, SAYS GIBBONS

By FLOYD GIBBONS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

Cairo, Nov. 12 (INS) — British preparations in Egypt for any eventualities in the event of an Anglo-Italian conflict continue apace. Alexandria harbor is still choked with a hundred thousand tons of John Bull's finest battleships, while new units of air and land forces continue to arrive in Egypt, the Sudan, and Red Sea ports, augmenting the present strong garrisons.

All this is being done with a minimum of war-like display and with little if any publication of arrivals.

While Ethiopia continues slowly shrinking both its northern and southern fronts before unopposed Italian advances, British munitions are pouring into Central Ethiopia, across the British Somaliland border.

Both English and Egyptian Red Cross and ambulance units are en route to take up work with the Ethiopian armies in the field.

I believe the new British policy with regard to Italy is to be a gradual tightening of the screws economically and financially with the objective of prolonging Italy's African adventure to such an extent it will hasten prospects of an Italian internal collapse, which, in the absence of any prospects of application of military sanctions, is Britain's present hope and wish.

rope, not afraid of it, keeps pouring gold in here because it knows this is the safest country.

Karl H. Von Wiegand reports: "Ethiopia's defense line crumbling before speedy Italian attacks; 3000 more Ethiopian warriors leaving Addis Ababa chanting the melancholy refrain, 'We go to die! We go to die!' "

It is a pleasure to know that these fearless warriors usually change their minds when they see Italian planes in the air, hear the crackle of Italian machine guns, and see Italian tanks carrying cannon. Courageous, but sensible, the Ethiopians scatter in the brush, willing to meet hyenas and rhinoceroses rather than rolling tanks and flying planes. This wise preference saves many Ethiopian lives.

League of Nations observers have given up hope that Ethiopia "may yet hurl the Italians back before they reach the railroad."

Old-fashioned guns and spears cannot resist machine guns that fire hundreds of bullets a minute, with horrible accuracy.

An educated Ethiopian said to Mr. Karl Von Wiegand, "We Ethiopians do not mind dying," and there is no doubt of their courage. But why die, when it can do no good?

The Riffs and Druses, as Mr. Wiegand says, did not mind dying, but they died in vain, and in thousands.

Quins as Fine Movie Ladies Will Get But One Order

THEY NEED BE SIMPLY NATURAL

Hollywood, Nov. 12 (AP)—The Dionne quintuplets, signed this week for their first feature-length motion picture, will hear only one command from the director the day they start work.

It will be the French equivalent of "Be yourselves, ladies."

They won't be called upon to act.

"The story was designed with two purposes," said Darryl Zanuck, production chief at 20th Century-Fox studio, who placed them under contract. "Naturally, the emphasis will be on the babies, the routine of their daily lives, the gradually-developing differences in their temperaments.

Named for Doctor

"But almost equally important, from the standpoint of plot, will be the effect of the children on the community where they were born, and on the doctor who preserved their lives."

Zanuck disclosed that inhabitants of Callander, Ontario, Canada, birthplace of the "quints," probably will be "cast" for roles in the picture, which is entitled "The Country Doctor."

The scenarist, Sonya Levein, said she had made no efforts to construct definite lines of action for the children, either as individuals or as a group. She favors inventing bits of plot and experimenting on their reactions after the film company actually has begun work with them in Canada.

Real Drama There

"It would be interesting, for example, to show them being taught to say their prayers," she said. "The individual reactions of Marie, the serious one, as compared to Cecile, the lively one, probably would embody every element of real drama."

But, although the five famous children will not have to "act" in the regular sense of the word, at least one well-known Hollywood director was convinced of their ability to play actual roles.

He was Norman Taurog, considered the industry's most expert "baby specialist."

"The quintuplets could act," he said, conclusively.

"All you need when you have children in pictures is a little ingenuity. Those Dionne babies seem to have more than enough intelligence to do the rest."

Two N. H. Men Hit By Autos; 1 Dead

Concord, N. H., Nov. 12—A former tree warden, Thomas J. McPhillips, 49, died today of injuries suffered last night when struck by a car driven, police say, by Miss Lydia Chittendon, a nurse.

Thomas F. Mullaney, 79, also of Concord, was in a critical condition after being struck by a car within ten minutes and less than a mile from where McPhillips was hit. Both were walking on the highway.

Ready Now for Jack Frost

"Can't a lady have a little privacy?" "Quin" Cecile Dionne's expression seems to say, as the cameraman—almost a fixture these days in the Dafoe nursery—intrudes just at fitting time and interrupts the trying on of Cecile's new winter coat. Nurse Lamoureux is pinch-hitting as modiste's assistant.

Trying to sip a glass of water and look pretty for the camera, both at the same time, is a large order for any young woman of 17 months, but "Quin" Emelie Dionne seems to be managing it. Lending a helping hand is Nurse Leroux, who realizes that trying on clothes, even such lovely new clothes as the "quins'" winter costumes, is a thirsty business.

Fitzgerald Asks More ERA Funds

Acting Mayor John I. Fitzgerald today appealed to President Roosevelt for immediate action to assist 25,000 ERA workers whose living has been cut because of the failure of the Federal government to provide sufficient allotments of funds to maintain previous hours of work and wages.

"The families of 25,000 Boston ERA workers are now suffering hardships because of cuts in area allotments and consequent reductions in working hours and wages," Acting Mayor Fitzgerald's telegram to the President said.

"The majority of these workers are the only bread-winners of large families.

"I appeal to you in behalf of the undernourished children of these families for an increase in the Boston ERA allotment and restoration of working hours and wage schedules. A cold wave is due tonight, and, therefore, I respectfully urge instant action."

Bridegroom Thief Gets Jail Term

Cyril P. Curtis, 22, of Billerica, the burglar bridegroom arrested October 26, within two minutes of his marriage to a Chelsea girl, today was sentenced to an indefinite term in Concord Reformatory.

He pleaded guilty in Middlesex Superior Court to three charges of breaking and entering and four of larceny.

His bride, 17-year-old former Margaret Carpenter, of Spencer avenue, Chelsea, was not recognized in the courtroom crowd although she has said she still loves him.

Police said Curtis was not only married in a stolen suit but stole his wedding gift to his bride.

RICH GERMAN DOCTOR VICTIM

New York, Nov. 12 (AP) — A 43-year-old German political scientist, Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, was shot to death today in his fashionable Sutton place apartment.

Vera Stretz, 26, described as his former secretary and fiancee, was charged with suspicion of homicide in that she allegedly fired "four bullets causing his death."

Miss Stretz, found on a fire escape of the building, first admitted, police said, that she had shot Dr. Gebhardt, but in the police lineup she refused to talk about the slaying.

"I have nothing to say," she replied listlessly to all questions.

Buries Face

At her arraignment before Magistrate Michael A. Ford in Homicide Court she was held without bail for a hearing November 21.

Gebhardt, clad only in a nightshirt, was found dead in his apartment on the 21st floor of the Beekman Tower Hotel shortly before 3 a. m.

Patrolman John Holden found Miss Stretz seated on a fire escape step.

"Did you shoot that man upstairs?" he demanded.

"Yes, I did," Holden said she admitted calmly.

In her purse detectives said they found a pistol and cartridges.

Gebhardt was described by friends as a wealthy and learned German. He was a member of the firm of Frank Von Knopp, Inc., importers and exporters of shoe machinery.

Wrote Will

In the young woman's room in the same building as Gebhardt's apartment, police said they found an unwitnessed will, written by her on Sunday.

Investigators suggested the possibility she had planned to end her own life after shooting Gebhardt.

Miss Stretz's father, Frank Stretz, met her at the police station. She did not speak, bursting into tears when he spoke to her.

"Vera, what's happened to you?" he asked.

Widow in Germany Mystified at Shooting

Karlsruhe, Baden, Germany, Nov. 12 (INS)—A sobbing widow, Frau Fritz Gebhardt, was completely mystified today over possible reasons for the shooting of her husband, Dr. Gebhardt, who was found dead in a New York hotel early today, but she was able to shed some light on Gebhardt's business affairs that took him occasionally to America.

She was staggered at the reported claim of Miss Vera Stertz, the woman allegedly found in his room after the tragedy, that Gebhardt had broken a promise to marry her.

Frau Gebhardt had never heard of Miss Stertz. The Gebhardts have four children.

Gebhardt, the widow said, had connections with a New York business office maintained by distant relatives, and Gebhardt sometimes visited New York, reportedly to secure foreign exchange and raw materials.

Schoolboy Killed, 2 Hurt in Crash

Medway, Nov. 12—One schoolboy was killed and two others badly injured today when the automobile in which they were riding to school blew a tire and went into a skid on Village street here.

The automobile swerved to pass a truck, according to police, when the blowout threw the car onto a soft shoulder.

The machine then hit a telephone pole, and finally ended its destructive course against a thick stone wall.

The dead youth was said by police to be Russell Thompson, 15, of Exchange street, Millis.

Gordon, who is 17, sustained a fracture of the spine and other injuries. His name was placed on the danger list at Milford Hospital.

Robert, 15, sustained a broken shoulder, but is expected to live.

The brothers also live in Millis.

Leo White, a resident of this was unhurt.

The machine was demolished.

According to police, the boys were on their way to St. Mary's school in Milford when the accident occurred.

Rites for Mrs. Kimball

HER DEATH SUBJECT OF GRAND JURY INQUIRY

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Death, Sept. 11, of blonde Evelyn Hoey, victim of a mysterious shooting at the country place of Henry H. Rogers, Jr., near Doylestown, Pa., is now the subject of a grand jury inquiry at West Chester, Pa., with Rogers under summons as one of several principal witnesses.

Gen. Liggett Near Death

San Francisco, Nov. 12 (USA)—Lieutenant General Hunter K. Liggett, who commanded the American first army in the World War, today lay near death in Letterman hospital.

ROGERS Waits Death QUIZ

JURY PROBES HOEY MYSTERY

West Chester, Pa., Nov. 12 (AP)—A grand jury, assembled because of what the court termed "unusual circumstances," moved slowly today in its investigation of the death of lovely Evelyn Hoey, "blues" singer friend of Henry Huddleston Rogers, III., in whose home she was found shot to death on Sept. 11.

The jury heard but two witnesses in its first session, D. W. Faulk, a photographer, and Henry Mathews, telephone official.

County officials said they were summoned to identify photographs of the Rogers farm home, and to testify concerning telephone calls placed and received there the night Miss Hoey was found shot to death in the bedroom of Rogers, Standard Oil fortune heir, son of the late Colonel Henry Huddleston Rogers.

Listed for examination were 20 witnesses, including coroner's jury whose conduct at the inquest two months ago the court ordered investigated.

Counsel for young Rogers, William S. Gawthrop, said his client was in West Chester prepared to testify.

Senator Cavanagh Made Court Clerk

State Senator Charles T. Cavanagh, of Milton street, Cambridge, today took over his new duties as clerk of the East Cambridge district court. His appointment was confirmed last week.

and insist that henceforth all materials used in the construction of the bridge be American-made.

While Burkan was making his announcement, Colonel W. H. Hudson, engineer in charge of construction for the authority, declared that approval of the order for the German steel was being held in abeyance pending word from Washington.

The Non-Sectarian and Anti-Nazi league, of which Samuel Untermyer is upresident, dispatched a telegram to Public Works Administrator Ickes, urging him to halt the use of German steel on federal projects.

UNTERMYER PROTEST

The telegram read:

"Strongly protest your disregard of all liberty-loving Americans' attitude toward Nazi regime in Germany in approving purchase of German steel piling for Tri-Borough Bridge out of funds intended to create work for American unemployed."

In making public the contents of the telegram, officials of the league said Germany had been able to win the contract only by virtue of large subsidies given to the steel industry by the Hitler government.

With indications of widespread disapproval of government policy in the use of foreign products, PWA officials notified Hudson that final decision might come today.

Acting Mayor Deutsch and Borough Presidents Lyons of the Bronx, Levy of Manhattan and Harvey of Queens—the three boroughs that will be linked through construction of the Tri-Borough bridge—declared themselves unalterably opposed to use of foreign materials in relief construction.

They expressed the opinion, already voiced by steel leaders, that the policy tended to defeat the government's purpose in appropriating funds—to relieve unemployment in this country and aid American industries.

Simultaneously, Burkman will meet with his fellow-members on the Bridge Authority to consider the issue.

One of the contractors on the bridge project, a PWA job, started the local controversy by making a sub-contract calling for purchase of the German steel.

DISCLAIMS POWER

Robert Moses, member of the authority, disclaimed either responsibility for the contract or authority to intervene if it is consummated.

The steel producers' position is that they are unable to compete with German concerns because of low labor costs under Hitler, and government subsidies to the Nazi steel industry. Further, the Nazi government encourages exports by arranging a secret rebate on ocean freight rates, it is charged.

These factors result in "dumping" by German firms doing business with this country, American steel men contend.

In explaining his own inability to intervene in the situation, Moses said:

"The Tri-Borough Bridge Authority is not buying any of the materials going into the bridge. That is all done by contractors. They, in turn, are guided by rulings laid down in Washington.

"Under existing regulations, a foreign bidder must not only be able to meet shipment costs and tariff duties, but, in addition he must underbid American manufacturers by 15 per cent to get a contract."

53 PER CENT LOWER

Bids were submitted for the Tri-Boro Bridge project by the Carnegie Steel Co., Illinois Steel Co., Bethlehem Steel Corp., Inland Steel Co. and Jones & Laughlin Steel Co.

German steel makers also competed. The German bid, it was said, was 53 per cent lower than any submitted by the American concerns.

Moses insisted the sub-contractor had no alternative in the matter. He said:

"The whole thing is a matter for the lawyers to work out. The rules for these Federal projects were prescribed by Congress, I don't know what anyone can do about it."

The Iron and Steel Institute is expected to meet in this city today to take up the plan of campaign of the industry in detail should the federal authorities persist in their determination to buy German steel.

DEUTSCH WANTS ACTION

Acting Mayor Deutsch, pointing out the prime purpose of the government in appropriating funds was to aid Americans, declared:

"Generally speaking, I believe no materials used on works projects which are obtainable in this country should be purchased from Germany or any other country, even though the price is lower.

"I don't believe in provincialism, but these funds were intended to foster employment in America, and I am unable to understand why they should be spent abroad. This policy of purchasing materials abroad undermines on the one hand what we are trying to do on the other hand. That is, we are spending money abroad which was designed to give employment in this country."

Deutsch, who led the recent investigation of relief administration within the city, continued:

"I don't believe the five billion dollars of relief money will be wisely spent if you don't exhaust every possible resource in this country.

"If the products can possibly be purchased in this country, they should be.

"If we can't get them here, that's another question. I understand that in this case, materials were obtainable in this country."

David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, declared:

"The American Federation of Labor, of course, is avowedly in favor of patronizing United States industries. The Federation also has accepted a program against Germany. These two principles seem particularly important with regard to the Tri-Borough bridge situation.

Warn U. S. on Foreign Steel Buying

New York, Nov. 12 (US)—Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, warned the government in July that the purchase of foreign steel by the Public Works Administration would result in increased unemployment of American steel workers. An order issued by a deputy administrator of the PWA on May 25, 1935, contained this "Must" clause:

"A borrower of money must buy foreign material where the value of the order is $10,000 or more and the price is 15 per cent less."

Discussing the order, following a meeting of Bethlehem directors, Grace said that a protest had been entered in Washington and that the American Iron and Steel Institute had been intrusted with the presentation of objections to the ruling.

Eugene Grace

IN ANY EVENT, GRACE CONTINUED, FOREIGNERS COULD SHIP STEEL AND SELL IT IN THE UNITED STATES AT 15 PER CENT AND MORE BELOW THE DOMESTIC PRICE AND STILL MAKE A PROFIT.

Imports of foreign steel are mounting at an alarming pace, Grace declared, and he quoted statistics for the first five months of 1935, which were 65 per cent above the 1934 period. As against this, he pointed out, domestic production was less than 3.5 higher for the same months.

Germany, Grace said, was the greatest competitor of the American steel industry.

LABOR EXPOSES REDS' PLOT ON HEARST PAPERS

By PHILIP PEARL

Washington, Nov. 12—Radical attempts to retaliate against the Hearst newspapers for their aggressive campaign against Communism was emphatically repudiated at the recent American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City and at a later meeting of its executive council, it became known today.

Two resolutions were introduced at the convention by a minority group of Communist sympathizers seeking to brand the Hearst publications as enemies of the American Labor Movement.

These attacks were considered by the resolutions committee, composed of leaders of the most powerful unions in the country. The committee voted an unanimous report, which declared:

"Your committee is of the opinion that a number of newspapers have shown themselves to be actively hostile to the trade union movement, but that the Hearst publications cannot be included in this category."

Exposing the motives of the sponsors of the resolutions, the committee added:

"Those who read the Hearst publications are aware that during the year they have carried a series of articles exposing the tyranny and terrorism in Russia."

In their haste to adjourn, delegates to the convention authorized the A. F. of L.'s executive council to act on several dozen committee reports, including the one on the anti-Hearst resolutions.

The executive council at a later meeting unanimously endorsed the committee's report and its attitude on the Hearst newspapers.

David Dubinsky, member of the executive council, and president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, said:

"It was obvious that the purpose of these resolutions was to get even with the Hearst newspapers for their anti-Communistic policies. American labor has no grievance against the Hearst newspapers."

Other labor chiefs pointed out that the sponsors of the anti-Hearst resolutions were the only ones who opposed adoption by the convention of an amendment to the A. F. of L. constitution denying recognition of state and central organizations to union leaders who profess Communism.

HOVEY'S STAGES 'FIRST NIGHT' AT STORE

With all the pomp and circumstance of a gala first night, Hovey's department store on Summer street will hold its housewarming tonight at 8 o'clock.

For two hours Boston will be permitted to wander through the store and see for itself the results of five months of modernization achieved at a cost of nearly $500,000.

There will be an exhibit on every one of the five floors, and shows in most of them, running the gamut from entertainment by stage stars to fashion shows by living models.

GRAND NEW FLOORING

The first thing that will greet the eyes of the throngs will be the floor itself, in inlaid artistry, combined with coral and chartreuse tones will be easy alike on the feet and eyes of shoppers.

The two new stairways and a new bank of elevators will make getting about in the new Hovey's as convenient as wandering through a private home.

Among those who will attend to entertain the housewarming guests will be:

GOVERNOR TO ATTEND

The State will be represented by Governor Curley, the city by former mayor John I. Fitzgerald, president of the city council, and the long arm of the law by Police Commissioner Eugene M. Mahoney.

The principal fashion show will be held on the new second fashion floor, which itself is enlarged and redecorated, during which 40 models will display the new apparel to its best advantage.

On the same floor will be a fur show, also with models, and on the street floor will be a further fashion show of silks.

Much of the display will deal with the 100 years of progress evidenced in the hairdressing and corsetry arts, which have taken place since the founding of the store in 1835.

No merchandise will be sold.

But the new display features will be dressed with the best the market affords, and will be shown to Boston by salesgirls.

FACTS

Washington, Nov. 12 (US)—This year the government of the United States cost the people ten times as much as it did in 1914.

Congress appropriated over 10,000 million dollars for the fiscal year 1936.

Last year the government collected $5,500,000,000 and spent $7,575,000,000.

STATE SPEEDS ROGERS' FUND

Massachusetts is preparing its tribute to Will Rogers.

Tomorrow a final organization meeting of the state Will Rogers memorial committee will be held to perfect plans to complete the drive by Thanksgiving.

While the exact character of the memorial to America's beloved humorist and philosopher is still undecided, it will reflect the feeling a nation had for him.

P. A. O'Connell, president of the E. T. Slattery Company, is chairman of the local committee.

He is being aided by other prominent Boston businessmen including John Shepard, 3rd, Edward Milton, Joseph Brennan, Alexander Brin, Joseph A. Tomasello and A. J. Philpott. Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley is the State representative on the committee.

Organization of local committees throughout the state will begin at once.

Reds in New England:

Adroit Trick Used By Communists

'UNITED FRONT' PLEA LURES UNWARY TO SPREAD TENETS

(This is the third in a series on Communist activities in New England).

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American).

The most insidious maneuver of the New England district chiefs of the Communist Party, in the fresh spurt of activity now beginning, will be the "United Front."

This is the trick of soliciting the co-operation of non-Communist organizations in labor strife, political activity, public demonstrations and youth movements.

The Communist student organizations, such as the National Student League, are under strict orders to employ this maneuver in all their activities.

The various sections and units of the New England district of the Communist party are under orders to employ it wherever possible.

The district headquarters organization is specializing in employing it in an attempt to form a farmers' and workers' political party.

Acclaims Success

This document shows that Dimitroff acclaimed the success attained in the United States by use of the United Front maneuver by Communist youth organizations.

It quotes him as follows:

"It was sufficient in the United States to proceed to apply the United Front. Considerable successes at once were achieved.

"And so the main task of the Communist Youth Movement in capitalist countries must be to advance boldly in the direction of bringing about the United Front, in all youth activities.

"The tremendous importance of even the first steps in this direction—its tremendous importance for the revolutionary movement of youth—is shown by these examples in the United States and others in France during the recent past.

Serious Menace

"The Young Communist League must strive in every way to unite the forces of all non-Fascist mass organizations of youth, including the formation of various kinds of joint organizations, for the struggle against Fascism, against the militarization of youth, and for the economic and cultural rights of the younger generation—in order to draw these youths to our side, no matter where they may be in the factories, the army barracks, the fleet, the schools, the cultural and other organizations."

And when Dimitroff speaks of Fascism in the United States he means Americanism. When he speaks of Fascists in the United States, he means those who believe in the American system of government.

"In contradistinction to German Fascism, American Fascism tries to portray itself as the custodian of the Constitution and American democracy."

And he added:

"If it succeeds in penetrating to the broad masses, it may become a serious menace to us in the very near future."

Seek Co-operation

Co-operating in the meeting were such non-Communist groups as the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. and the Student Federation, along with the Communist National Student League and the radical Student League for Industrial Democracy, as well as other organizations on both sides.

Subversive activities by both the National Student League and the Student League for Industrial Democracy were denounced by President Parke R. Kolbe of Drexel Institute last night at a meeting of college presidents and deans in this city.

At every Communist gathering in New England, official or social, placards and banners hail the Farmer-Labor Political Party movement.

The document shows that the aim set at Moscow for this country in this field of activity is the formation of such a party by co-operating with non-Communist groups.

Foils New Party

This is intended, not only to carry the Communists toward their goal, but also to thwart any attempts of firm believers in American democracy, who may be dissatisfied with the two major political parties, from forming a third party based on American principles. The Dimitroff instructions state exactly that.

And the plan further makes it clear that all groups which, tricked into the United Front at first, later refuse to accept the Communist doctrines, will be cut off as "enemies of the revolution" when the proper time arrives.

In the Communists' own words, acceptance of their doctrines means acceptance of the aim of "seizing control of the government by revolution when the time is ripe."

Should that time come, and success be achieved, there would be a United Front no longer. Should that time come, there would be only Communists and non-Communists. And the latter will be branded "enemies of the state."

Eager to Trick

For the present, under instructions of "Comrade" Dimitroff, in accordance with Soviet ideals, District No. 1 of the Communist party of the U. S. A. is eager for the "United Front." Eager to trick the unsuspecting, both individuals and organizations, into co-operative effort.

A minor document in the Communist party files here in Boston shows that Alfred Baker Lewis, Socialist party leader in New England, charged the Communist party with insincerity in its suggestion of a united front.

That charge was made a year ago. The maneuver has since been polished for use in more adroit ways.

The method now is to find some ground on which unsuspecting groups neither Communist nor Socialist, will readily co-operate with Communist organizations, such as the anti-war movement. While the unsuspecting groups argue against participating in the wars of Europe, in which stand all real Americans concur, the radicals slip in propaganda against participation in any war, even in a war of defense. And they slip in propaganda for internationalism as well, and for civil strife of "class against class."

That is the way the United Front works.

More disclosures on the activities of Communists will be published in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Ends His Life With Dynamite

New Preston, Ct., Nov. 12 (AP)—Selectman Oscar Swanson, 65, killed himself today by setting off a piece of dynamite in a storage shed in the rear of his home, Medical Examiner F. W. Wersebe gave a verdict of suicide.

Dr. Wersebe expressed the belief Swanson a contractor and gravel dealer, lighted a fuse after placing his head over the dynamite.

MYSTERY SHOTS KILL BRIDE IN WORCESTER

had followed the same course into her body, above the right breast, puncturing a lung.

Her condition is too low to permit attempts to probe for them.

To fire the gun, the hammer must first be drawn back to the cocked position where it remains until the trigger is pulled.

Investigators were at a loss to understand how Mrs. Army twice performed this act by accident, firing a second bullet into the wound caused by the first.

Two discharged cartridges only were found in the cylinder of the revolver.

The victim's husband, Walter R. Army, 28, and her mother, Mrs. Charles Remington, said they were on the first floor of the home which they occupy together when they heard two shots fired on the second floor where, a moment later they found Mrs. Army with a single wound in her right breast.

Before her elopement to Oneida, N. Y., last June, Mrs. Army was a junior at the High School of Commerce. Her father died a month before her marriage.

Burke Asks Quincy To Buy Golf Links

A petition asking that the Quincy City Council authorize the purchase of the Stony Brae golf course will be introduced when the body meets Monday evening.

The petitioner, James A. Burke, secretary to former Mayor Charles A. Ross, will seek to have the golf course made over into a municipal links for Quincy residents.

Admit Marriage October 27

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MRS. DANNO O'MAHONEY DANNO O'MAHONEY

DANNO WED 17 DAYS

Announcement by the Boston Evening American, two weeks ago, that Dan O'Mahony, world champion heavyweight wrestler, had secretly married, was confirmed today by the official recording at Cambridge City Hall.

The marriage license application revealed that Danno spells his name without any "e" in his last name, the entry on the application being spelled "O'Mahony."

Although repeatedly denied, the marriage return filed today with Cambridge officials showed Danno-of-Ballydehob was married Sunday, October 27, to Miss Julia Esther Burke, a nurse, of 76 Reservoir street, Cambridge.

The ceremony was performed at the rectory of St. Peter's Church, Observatory Hill, Cambridge, by the pastor, the Rev. Francis V. Murphy.

Following the ceremony, the small wedding party attended an informal reception at the Old House tearoom in Lexington, where even attendants of the tearoom are understood to have been pledged to secrecy.

Following the reception, the couple flew to New York, the new Mrs. O'Mahoney returning to Boston on Monday and not even waiting to see her bridegroom crush Ed Don George, former champion, in little more than five minutes that Monday night in Madison Square Garden.

Since his bridal, Danno has been out of town, but his bride has been in Cambridge, where she lives with her father, a retired city worker.

In the marriage application Danno gave his name as Daniel Michael O'Mahony (without any "e"), said he was 23 years old and that he is a resident of Ballydehob, Ireland, and a wrestler by occupation.

BRUNO APPEAL BEFORE U. S. HIGH COURT

Washington, Nov. 12 (INS)—Declaring that he was denied the fair trial guaranteed by the Constitution, Bruno Richard Hauptmann today appealed to the nation's highest legal tribunal.

The petition for a writ of review of his conviction for the kidnaping-murder of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's infant son, drawn by his lawyers, was formally docketed in the Supreme Court.

A vigorous defense of his trial at Flemington was expected to be given the court by the State of New Jersey, which has 20 days to answer Hauptmann's petition after service.

RULING BY CHRISTMAS

The high court will act on the petition soon after New Jersey's answer is filed. A ruling is expected by Christmas.

Should the high court find merit in Hauptmann's contentions, oral argument will be ordered. But if the petition is denied, Hauptmann faces death.

Hauptmann's lawyers declared that "mob spirit" controlled the trial and charged that presence of Lindbergh in the courtroom was prejudicial to him.

The petition, filed by Egbert Roscrans, C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope, counsel, declared Hauptmann was "denied due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed under the 14th amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

FOUR "ERRORS" CITED

Errors cited were:

1—Because of "the hysterical mob spirit with which the jury was surrounded during the entire conduct of the trial."

3—Because of the daily presence of Colonel Lindbergh, "which unduly influenced the jury to view him as the real prosecutor and constantly presented to the jury the picture of a bereaved father, for whose sorrow the world demanded a sacrifice."

4—Because of the inflammatory summation of Attorney-General Wilentz and because of Judge Trenchard's charge to the jury "portrayed manifest approval of the State's theories" and was argumentative.

CONFLICTING THEORIES

The petition charged that the prosecutor based his plea on the theory that the infant son of Lindbergh was killed by a fall when he was being carried down a ladder from the upstairs bedroom.

But Attorney-General Wilentz, it was contended, said in his summation that the child was crushed into insensibility in his crib and struck with a chisel.

The petition was particularly bitter toward alleged failure of Judge Trenchard to keep the jury separated from the general public. It was alleged that this made the jury subject to "mob spirit."

Excerpts from Attorney-General Wilentz' summation were set out in the brief accompanying the petition.

MILL DECLINE LAID TO 'DEAL'

industry in New Hampshire—foreign competition, the processing tax, wage differentials and levels, over production, transportation and destructive competition.

These were characterized as "causes beyond control, brought about by basis conditions within the industry as a whole or by legislation or administration of national scope," and reflect the entire New England decline.

Pointiny out that the now-closed Manchester mills of Amoskeag Manufacturing Company once employed 12,000 workers, the committee warned that liquidation would increase the relief and taxation burdens upon all citizens of the state.

Liquidation appears logical and imperative from the standpoint of many Amoskeag share and bond holders who have no hope for the future of the mill nor any interest in Manchester or in New Hampshire, the committee stated.

It declared that a 50-hour week, as compared to the 80-hour weekly schedule, is sufficient to meet production demand.

The governor's committee recommended abolition of the New Hampshire stock-in-trade tax to alleviate the industry's burdens, and urged a "wider and more enlightened interest in the present-day problems of the industry locally."

Adoption of a plan similar to that devised by Fall River, to give tax relief to building not being used, was suggested.

One suggestion was that "Amoskeag trustees be urged to make any present sacrifice, warranted by the prospects of a general business recovery and their own quite possible future prosperity, to give their workers an early opportunity to prove their willingness to co-operate."

Abolition of the state stock-in-trade tax, the committee added, also would aid farming and other industries.

The survey included a study of the entire textile industry in New England, and the committee announced a report of state-wide application would be made later.

WOMAN PLEADS FOR 'MERCY' DEATH

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP)—The Buffalo Times, in a copyrighted story, today published the request of Miss Anna Becker, 34, for the Erie County Medical Association to appoint a physician to take her life because of her belief she never will recover from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Bedridden for two years, Miss Becker praised the London doctor who "confessed" taking the lives of five hopeless invalid patients.

She was awarded $6000 for her injuries in a taxicab accident October 21, 1933. The insurance carrier for the taxi concern, however, is in the process of liquidation and she can not collect.

DICTATES LETTER

Miss Becker dictated a letter to the medical association.

The medical association, however, has not received the letter. In it she said, the Times stated, that "two years ago I suffered injuries in an automobile accident, the most serious of which is incurable, my doctor tells me."

"I am constantly in pain and I have nothing left to live for," the letter, as republished in the Times, continues. "I want to die.

"In the name of mercy, I ask you to appoint a doctor to take my life. A competent physician could certainly kill me with less pain than I endure in an hour.

BURDEN TO FRIENDS

"Now I am not only in agony myself, I am a burden to my friends. I have no money to pay my bills. I can never be sure where or when my next meal is coming from. Or for that matter, if it is coming.

"This decision was not made hastily. For 140 horrible days since the crash, I have thought of death and would have taken my own life long ago, if I had the courage."

Her physician, who refused to permit his name to be used, was quoted by the Times as saying he did not consider Miss Becker as incurable if she could be treated at a clinic "like the Mayos, or Johns Hopkins."

Parker Woe! Teeth Loom For Auto Law

Bad news for parkers.

Boston sought legalization of its traffic and parking regulations at a hearing before the State Public Works Department today.

Failure of the city to conform with a law calling for written approval of these regulations by the state department has been in large measure responsible for police inactivity against downtown parkers.

This inactivity has made Boston a "parker's paradise" since a ruling by the attorney-general that state approval was necessary and subsequent court indifference to parking prosecutions.

Springfield and about 200 other communities which have failed to comply with the law will follow Boston in its moves to legalize traffic laws.

2 Holdup Men Picked in Lineup

From a police headquarters lineup of 45 persons, largest in several months due to the holiday week-end, two men were picked by recent holdup victims today.

One, a resident of East Boston, was identified in connection with three robberies by six victims. The other, a Roxbury man, was identified by a woman victim. Charges will be brought against them on the basis of the identifications, police said.

No. Quincy Eleven Gets Grid Souvenir

Each member of North Quincy high school's football team will have a souvenir of their victory over Quincy high yesterday.

Principal James Collins and Mayor Thomas F. Burgin decided the uprooted goal posts be turned over to the manual training department and pencil stands, calendar stands, etc., be made from the wood.

Methuen Amnesia Victim Identified

Lawrence, Nov. 12—A former employer today identified a young man amnesia victim, who had wandered into the police station here, as Robert Henry, 21, textile worker, of Pleasant street, Methuen.

Edward Henry told police his son had been worrying over an approaching operation. The youth was taken to Lawrence Municipal Hospital.

Legion Spurs Drive for Members

LEO MURPHY
"Suffolk Will Aid"

The Massachusetts American Legion membership drive is going "over the top."

This was expressed today by Vice State Commander Raymond McEvoy, chairman of the Legion membership committee, following two days of active campaigning throughout the state for new members.

The membership drive which was officially launched Sunday night by Governor James M. Curley and State Commander John H. Walsh, lasting throughout the week, should be a success, according to early returns.

Throughout the Bay State, Legion officials and the commanders of the 319 Legion posts are driving hard to gain new members.

Executives of the 14 county councils are holding special meetings this week. It is expected by Saturday night a new high mark will be reached for membership in Massachusetts.

Commander Walsh stated today that he expects his department will be rated as one of the largest of the 48 departments in the Legion when the drive is over.

Leo Murphy, commander of Suffolk county council, following the Armistice Day parade yesterday, announced that each post under his jurisdiction pledged their support in boosting membership.

Youth Indicted In Police Killing

Bridgeport, Ct., Nov. 12 (AP)—Two true bills charging Frank Palka, 23, of Buffalo, N. Y., with first degree murder in the slaying of two Bridgeport policemen, were returned today by a grand jury in superior court.

Expressionless, the husky prisoner heard the reading of the bills and in an even voice pleaded innocent to the charge. He will be tried during the January term.

SUICIDE NEWS TIP WINS $25 FOR WOMAN

Once more a woman's alertness—and her promptness in telephoning a news tip to the Boston Evening American—wins the top award of $25 in the American-Advertiser Weekly News Tip Contest.

This week's big check goes to a Watertown resident, who wishes her name to be withheld.

She enabled the Boston Evening American to be first on the street with the story of a Boston University student's suicide, a suicide made more dramatic by the fact that the victim had recently inherited a substantial legacy.

SECOND PRIZE SPLIT

The second prize of $10 was divided between two tipsters whose contributions were judged by the editor to be of equal value.

One enabled the Boston Evening American to obtain exclusive pictures of a society wedding.

The other gave the Boston Sunday Advertiser a news beat on the shooting of a shoe store manager in a hold-up attempt on Devonshire street. This tip came from Noah Solomon, 294 Washington street.

The person who furnished the wedding tip has asked that his name be withheld.

FIRE TIP AWARDS

Two prizes of $2 each were awarded.

One goes to H. J. R., Eldridge road, Jamaica Plain, for a tip to the Boston Sunday Advertiser on a Huntington avenue fire.

The other goes to Mrs. Curley, 172 Huntington avenue, for giving the Boston Sunday Advertiser information on the same fire.

Heading the list of $1 awards is the name of Harry Poulakas, Box 402, Buzzard's Bay. He supplied a tip to the Boston Sunday Advertiser on a body taken from Long Pond, Bourne.

MANY $1 WINNERS

Other $1 checks go to Frances Kosiosky, 10 Howard street, Everett, for an Everett fire tip; Reuben Weinrich, 191 Chestnut street, Revere, PWA story tip; name withheld, tip on Army Base women unpaid; "Whitey" Kamfer, 17 Vesta road, Dorchester, City Hall avenue awning fire.

Helen Fitzgerald, 58 Bellingham avenue, Beachmont, tip on burglary attempt; Joseph Fredberg, 71 Clifton street, Malden, tip on Taunton auto accident; name withheld, tip on finding of runaway Lenetta Jones of Braintree.

Remember to call Liberty 4000 and ask for the News Tip Editor.

General Kuhn Dead

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 12 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, 71, U. W. M. S. A. retired, who served 40 years in the army, died here today. In the World War he commanded the 79th Division, in this country and in France.

Elevator Blazes

North Adams, Nov. 12—Every available fireman was pressed into service here early today when a dangerous fire swept the grain elevator of the Berkshire Coal and Grain Company.

$5500 AWARDED INJURED VETERAN

Fall River, Nov. 12—Armistice Day had a new and happy meaning for Gilbert J. Croghan, 39, of Lafayette street, crippled for life in an accident aboard a battleship during the World War, it was learned today.

For with the holiday came news to Croghan that his application had received favorable action in Washington, and that he had been allowed $5500 compensation for his injuries.

Slayer is Suicide

Philadelphia, Nov. 12—Albert (Whitey) Morton, sought as the slayer of a New Jersey state trooper, committed suicide by gas today in his North Philadelphia apartment hideout.

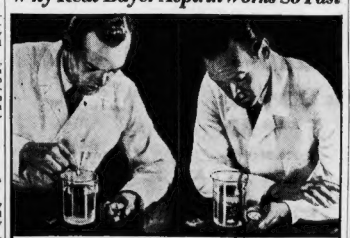
Why Real Bayer Aspirin Works So Fast



Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast — IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water . . . By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Quick Relief for Headaches, Neuritis, Rheumatic Pains

The old adage says, "what you see you believe." So the scientist, pictured above, shows you two actual photographs to prove the quick action of Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Look at them, and you will see one reason why Scientists rate BAYER ASPIRIN among the fastest agents, now known or ever known, for the relief of headaches, neuritis, neuralgia and rheumatic pains.

You'll see that a Bayer Aspirin tablet, dropped into a glass of water, starts to disintegrate, or dissolve, before it hits the bottom of the glass. Hence, is ready to go to work almost instantly you take one. For what happens in that glass happens in your stomach when you take a BAYER ASPIRIN tablet. Relief comes in a few minutes.

Countless thousands know that about BAYER ASPIRIN. Know by experience that it brings the quick relief you want when in distress.

Keep this in mind the next time your work or play is handicapped by a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain. And ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name "BAYER ASPIRIN" when you buy. Learn for yourself how fast you can get relief.

STEVENS READY TO GO HIGHER INTO STRATO

Kimball, S. D., Nov. 12—Another record-breaking stratosphere balloon attempt became a definite possibility today when Captain A. W. Stevens pronounced the Explorer II fit in every respect for another flight.

Undamaged except for the patch fastened to it at the takeoff, the balloon is not only capable of another flight, but could make an additional 1000 feet altitude in the rarified atmosphere more than 14 miles above the earth, he said.

Speaking for himself, also for Captain Orvil Anderson, Captain Stevens said:

"As far as we are concerned, we would be perfectly willing and even glad to make another flight."

When the balloon reached an unofficial height of slightly more than 74,000 feet yesterday, eclipsing all previous official and unofficial altitude records, it was within about 1000 feet of its maximum, Captain Stevens stated.

COULD GO HIGHER

"We still had some ballast aboard and could have gone higher," he declared.

The precious triple-recording instruments upon which the official altitude of the balloon which soared over South Dakota and Nebraska yesterday will be determined today was in the hands of Dr. W. G. Brombacker, who will take them to Washington, where the official record will be determined.

"I am glad to be down safely and that the flight was successful," was Captain Anderson's first comment after the epic flight ended.

"Just before we landed, Captain Stevens and I let some of instruments go down by parachute as we couldn't tell how hard we would hit.

GOT MUCH DATA

"But the landing was just as successful as the flight.

"We rode the gondola down, landing very easy. As we touched, the gondola tilted and dragged a little way but then it righted fine.

"We got plenty of pictures and we think we got a good deal of scientific data—about as much as we expected to.

"When the crowd gathered at first we were afraid they would rip the balloon for souvenirs, but now all's well and the men who greeted us helped a lot."

Bill Boyds Near Parting Of Ways

Dorothy Sebastian

The Boyds have been separated for several days, the film couple revealed, he having moved to their Malibu place while Miss Sebastian remained here.

Reconciliation is doubtful and action to make the separation a matter of legal record is impending.

Miss Sebastian, an Alabama beauty and former Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress, said:

Talk of a trial separation was scoffed at by Boyd. He commented:

"Trial separations seem so futile, and whatever arrangements Dorothy and I make will be a matter of legal record."

Mrs. Root Held As Husband Slayer

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Daisy Alexander Root, 30, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned on a charge of slaying her husband, Brenton Root, after a quarrel over a night club "cigarette girl."

W. F. McLain, district attorney-general, said the young widow would go to trial sometime in January.

Held as "Idler" In Tax Shortage

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 12 (AP)—Walter J. Burke was at liberty under $5000 bonds today after his arrest on a technical charge of idleness in connection with an alleged shortage in the accounts of the city tax collector's office.

Auditors estimated there was an apparent shortage of $30,000 to $40,000.

SUSPECT DENIES VICE CHARGES

Arthur J. O'Connell, 26, of St. Botolph street, Back Bay, whose retrial on a charge of attacking a 10-year-old Roxbury girl is scheduled in Suffolk Superior court this week, pleaded not guilty to a morals charge today in Brookline district court.

This case was continued until November 20 by Judge Philip S. Parker. O'Connell remained at liberty under $200 bail.

O'Connell's arrest Saturday, followed complaints that a man was conducting himself improperly near the Brookline railroad station.

JOBS GOAL SET AT 113,000

Relief rolls of the unemployed now in the hands of State WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch will be the basis of a drive to employ 113,000 workers by November 25.

Rotch made this announcement after a lengthy conference with relief officials from Washington, which was called to speed plans to fill the quota for the state within the time limit set by the Washington headquarters.

Compiled by the ERA, the roll of needy relief cases has been preserved, Rotch said. In this manner it is expected that the quota will be filled much earlier than had been expected.

Jean Batten Off for North Africa

Casablanca, Morocco, Nov. 12 (AP)—Miss Jean Batten, New Zealand flier, hopped off today for Villa De Cisneros, Rio De Oro Spanish Northwest Africa.

She arrived here at 4:15 p. m. yesterday after a solo flight from Lympne, England, in an attempt to set an England to Brazil record.

Leginska's Opera 'Gale' To Be Given

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP)—Miss Ethel Leginska, English-born composer, today began to put the final work which polish on a will make operatic history later this month.

Ethel Leginska

The opening performance of Miss Leginska's "Gale" by the Chicago Civic Opera on November 23 will introduce to Chicago audiences the first woman in history of music to conduct an opera of her own composition presented by a major company.

The premiere, it was expected, will be a crowning achievement in the career of the woman who is already celebrated as a former conductor of the Montreal Opera Company and as the first woman to wield a baton before great Symphony orchestras in America and Europe.

She has been a regular conductor of the Boston Philharmonic Orchestra, the Boston Woman's Symphony Orchestra, and the Woman's Symphony Orchestra of Chicago.

$8,781,702 More For Bay State

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Comptroller-General J. R. McCarl today approved an additional $55,171,646 worth of WPA projects in nine states. This brought to $3,253,230,813 the total projects available for selection by state WPA administrators. Projects approved today included: Massachusetts, $8,781,702.

Hangs Self in Garage

Skowhegan, Me., Nov. 12 (AP)—The body of Fred L. Carpenter, 64, was found today by his son, Henry, hanging in the garage of their farm home here. Sheriff Martin J. Gallant said he was a suicide.

2 in Mast

Houston, Tex., Nov. 12 (AP)—Two stowaways from sunny Spain shivered in jail today because they erred in thinking the British ship Ratcliffe was bound for Los Palmas.

They hid in the vessel's hollow steel mast at Cueta, Spain, Juan Priate standing on Pedro Garcia's shoulders for two days after the ship left port before they gave up.

Legion Rejects Co-Ed Beauties

Gloucester, Nov. 12—Tradition that co-eds are most beautiful was blasted here when Miss Evelyn Brown, 22, of Beacon street, was named "Miss Cape Ann" by the American Legion.

Eighteen girls reached the finals. Six of them were college girls.

Still on Job

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Retire? Not Dan Louis, 62, even though the Eighth and Ninth avenue trolley cars were replaced today by buses.

"I started driving a horse car for the Eighth avenue lines in 1894," he said. "Three years later the horses went; I learned to run an electric car and never lost a day's work. After 38 years they taught me to run a bus, and still I'm not losing a day's work."

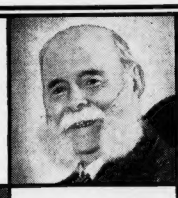
"What will YOU have?"

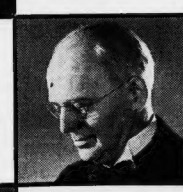
What's your favorite type of liquor? Whatever it is you'll find it in the complete G & W line...at the price you want to pay! For 103 years G & W has been the correct answer to "What's yours?" among men who know good whiskey. Pick out your choice below . . . and pick it up at your liquor dealer!

BONDED RYE or BOURBON?
G & W's "GOLD LABEL" STRAIGHT RYE OR STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKIES are especially rich and full-bodied. They're aged 6 years in wood and bottled in bond in Canada.



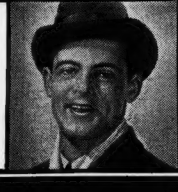
"SPECIAL" CANADIAN?
Men who like light-bodied whiskey prefer G & W "SPECIAL" CANADIAN. This old-time, pre-prohibition favorite is mellowed 6 years in wood and bottled in bond in Canada.

BLENDED WHISKIES?
Here are three blends at three prices. Let your taste decide whether it's G & W SEVEN STAR, G & W FIVE STAR or G & W TWO STAR for you! You can't lose, whatever you choose!



STRAIGHT WHISKIES?
Some like rye, some like bourbon—but all agree on G & W! Which do you prefer?... G & W PRIMROSE STRAIGHT RYE WHISKEY or G & W MOUNTAIN RIDGE STRAIGHT WHISKEY.

SCOTCH?
G & W imports Scotland's best for American connoisseurs. It's MacNAIR'S SCOTCH WHISKY. Another G & W triumph is G & W AMERICAN BLENDED SCOTCH WHISKY—a "Scotch" bargain!



DISTILLED GINS?
G & W's gins are distilled from grain. G & W LONDON DRY DISTILLED GIN is especially smooth. G & W CRYSTAL PALACE DISTILLED GIN is another grand mixer for all gin drinks.

Goodwin's First $50 Winner Ruined Life

Easy Money Turns Into Disaster

(This is the second of three articles by Charles W. Goodwin, written exclusively for the Boston Evening American. In it, the minister's son and confessed embezzler of $17,000, lost on slow horses, reveals how he became a "sucker" at race track tipsters.)

By CHARLES W. GOODWIN

Townsend, Nov. 12—The first horse I ever bet on won—and paid me $50.

Her name was Clotho.

Perhaps if I had known a little more about my Classics I should have been warned by the very name of the horse. But I only learned afterward that Clotho is one of the Three Fates.

She it is who spins the thread of life, determines the way in which it shall go, Lachesis, her sister, measures its length. Atropos cuts it off.

But to me Clotho was only a horse, one of the Whitney pets, and it was ridden that day by Robertson.

$10 on the Nose

I didn't know anything about horse racing, but I had heard of the Whitney stables, and I had heard of Robertson.

I put $10 on her nose, and she jumped home paying $10 to win. I made $50—and oh, how I wish I hadn't!

With 50 dollars of the track's money in my pocket, I was on my street. I bet $10 on Secula, and won another $50. Then I put $10 on Musing—I'll never forget those three horses. I won $180. One, two, three — and home I came with a little more than $284 of the easiest money I had ever seen.

CHARLES W. GOODWIN

His Horses Are Still Running

A lucky day? Far from it. It was the beginning of a life of foolishness that made me, for a time, a fanatic and a fall guy.

Knew It All

For I decided at once that if a beginner could do so well, an old-timer could do better.

I met an old-timer. A genial chap, who seemed to know all there was to know about the horses.

He knew their names, their past performances, their lineage and their trainers. He knew everything that can be learned about a horse except when it was going to win.

And he even pretended to know that!

He was a so-called "Big Shot."

I'm not entirely devoid of intelligence, no matter how much my present situation may tend to point that way. His mere statement that he knew when the horses would win never have convinced me.

But he gave me winner after winner. He never missed. And all the while he shrugged off the steadily mounting list of winners as though it were the most natural thing in the world.

Hadn't he studied them from childhood? Hadn't he grown up with the horses? Of course he could pick winners.

Fortune Turns

The faster the list of winners mounted, the more I trusted him, and the more I bet.

So that when he first gave me a loser, I was betting big money. And just as regularly as he had given me winners, he began to pick dogs.

Only, where I had been winning $10 and $20 bets, I was now losing $100 bets—and they mounted up. I began to double to recuperate, thinking my informant was merely having a bad streak.

Finally, as the losing streak became disaster, I decided to check up on my expert. I went to Saratoga Springs, and asked about him.

Yes, they knew him there. One of the best known touts.

Touts?

Yes, touts—a man who pretends to have a sure thing, and leads his victims along. If the horse wins, fine. If not, too bad.

Over His Head

Of course I dropped him immediately. But it was too late then. I was out over my head in a sea where there is no life guard.

I struck out with what little knowledge I had acquired. I met reputable turf figures, some of the best known. Honest men. Rich men. Famous men.

And then only did I learn that not even an owner, a trainer, a jockey—not one of them knows for certain when a horse will win.

I tried playing systems.

I think I tried at least 30 of them. Some of them made money for me, right from the start. But not for long. The farther I carried them along, the more money I lost on them eventually.

Others lost money for me right at the jump.

Now I know the only sure system. It's a little late, and it was mighty expensive. But I have learned it.

Only Sure System

My system is—DON'T PLAY THE HORSES IF YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO LOSE.

For the horses simply cannot be beaten.

My life is a wreckage.

I have lost the esteem of my neighbors, although they have been kind about it. My hand was shaken more times today than it has ever been shaken before.

But the property I once owned, for which I worked and saved, is gone. My home is gone. My car is gone.

Can I ever get them back—my self-respect, my car, my home?

I think so.

I believe I have thought out a way. I believe I have formed a plan which will cancel my debt to my fellows.

(In the last instalment of Charles W. Goodwin's story, which will appear tomorrow, exclusively, in the Boston Evening American, he will tell you about that plan.)

TWO VETERAN BODIES END BONUS SPLIT

Washington, Nov. 12 (US)—As Armistice Day, 17 years after the World War was being observed, it became known that leaders of America's two greatest veterans' organizations agreed to end their bonus differences and fight together for cash payment of the soldier debt by next February.

James Van Zandt, head of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, have concluded secret conferences which brought these two powerful groups to bonus legislation agreement for the first time.

Only failure of the Legion and the V. F. W. to agree on a bill prevented cash payment legislation at the last session of Congress. Fighting together, Murphy and Van Zandt are confident another veto will be overthrown in both House and Senate.

Public announcement of the agreement will be made after the Legion legislative committee meets here, probably early in December.

Van Zandt and Murphy both refused either to confirm or deny the agreement officially, but Universal Service learned all details of it from an unimpeachable source.

SILENCE AT LAST!

Noise Contest Ends at Midnight

By THE NOISE EDITOR

Few are there who are not grateful when noise ceases, and the Noise Editor announces today, with thankfulness in his heart, despite a ringing in his ears, that the Noise Contest will end tonight at the jangle of midnight.

This is to say, all letters sent to the Noise Editor must bear a postmark not later than 12 o'clock midnight on Tuesday, come what may—even if it's a new and novel noise.

Prize-winners in the noise contest for the five noisiest noises will be announced next Friday.

These winners of awards will each get a pair of tickets for the laugh-show "Three Men on a Horse," now playing at the Plymouth Theater. In addition, someone will receive a capital award of $25 in cash for the best of all the letters.

This means that even if you haven't had your letter selected out of hundreds for publication, you still have a chance to win the capital award in cash.

Three new letters published today from Mrs. W. H. O'Connell of 44 Kenton road, Jamaica Plain; Benjamin Methelis of 71A Clark avenue, Chelsea, and Miss Mae Skinner of 1 Florence street, Cambridge.

Mrs. O'Connell lists her five noisiest noises as the following:

"Scuffling along the sidewalk.

"Squeeky doors.

"The clanging of a street-car bell when I'm trying to make a left turn.

"Pigeons next door which insists on cooing me to sleep every night."

The five most disagreeable noises to Methelis are:

"Trolley cars.

"Heavy trucking.

"Ships and boat whistles.

"Auto horns.

"Fire boat sirens."

By Miss Skinner of Cambridge, the five noisiest noises are given as the following:

"People laughing at the wrong places in movie theater shows.

"People who tie dogs in yards and allow them to howl and bark during absence that runs sometimes until after midnight.

"People who talk in the street, usually in an automobile, until late hours, and apparently believe nobody is disturbed.

"Honking of horns in traffic; I know this is trite, but to me it is one of the worst annoyances.

"People who believe that their shouting and horseplay on beaches is very amusing to those who have brought children to the seashore and who are trying to make the youngsters sleep."

These are three, but for the short time remaining in this contest there is ample opportunity to get your own letter in. Remember only that letters in the five noisiest noises contest must carry a postmark before midnight tonight.

CURLEY PROBES JOB "SALES"

Persons who are asked to pay money in return for places on the state payroll have been asked by Governor Curley to come forward and tell their stories in an effort to stamp out the racket of "selling" state jobs.

The action by the governor is a direct result of the arrest of Angelo Purpura of Lawrence on a charge that he stole money from two persons on the promise of obtaining work for them from a state official.

Purpura is at present in Miami, where he was arrested on request of Boston police. Grand jury action against him will be taken today.

Jury Acquits Warners, Others

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 12 (US)—The moving picture conspiracy trial of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Paramount Pictures, R. K. O. Distributing Company, several affiliated concerns and five individual executives resulted in an acquittal verdict for all defendants by a federal court jury here.

The defendants had been charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, by allegedly withholding films from three theaters operated by the Fanchon and Marco-Koplar interests.

One of the highlights of the trial was the spirited closing argument of former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, a member of counsel for Warner Brothers.

The verdict was reached after only a half-hour's deliberation.

Mayflower Descendants Prepare For Banquet

By BETTY ALDEN

PEOPLE from other sections of the country have often made humorous comments as to the great number of New Englanders who boast of ancestors who came over on the Mayflower . . . We have often heard mid-Westerners remark that their great-great-great-grandfather was one of the barnacles, and whether or not we agree with these pleasantries, we are certainly compelled to admit that the signers of that now historic Mayflower compact were certainly a most prolific group . . .

JANE BUTLER SMITH

In addition to the many Bostonians who have already accepted invitations to the banquet of the Mayflower Society at the Somerset on November 21, a great many friends from out of town are being heard from by the committee . . .

Mrs. John Bross Lloyd of Philadelphia has written to Mrs. Walter Atherton that she is coming for the dinner and that she will stay with Mrs. Atherton . . .

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Reginald R. Belknap of Newport will arrive in Boston on the 19th to visit Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Montague of West Cedar street . . . On the evening of the 20th the officers of the staff of the Military Order of the World War will tender a dinner to the admiral, and the following evening he will be the Montagues' guest at the Mayflower dinner . . .

Rev. and Mrs. Henry Bradford Washburn have invited Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Standish Colburn (What could sound more typically Mayflowerish than Bradford and Standish?) of Biltmore Forest, North Carolina, to be their house guests for several days the week of the dinner . . . and Colonel William M. Chadbourne of New York City is coming over to join all the other Mayflowerites at this big celebration . . .

Those who attended last year's dinner regret to hear that Sir Thomas and Lady Tait of Montreal have had to forego their intended trip this year owing to the death of their only daughter, Miss Winnifred . . . Sir Thomas was one of the speakers last year . . .

• • •

Jane Butler Smith and her best beau, Keith Steele, did a little holiday celebrating last evening, occupying a pair of orchestra seats at the Boston opening of the 1936 edition of George White's Scandals . . . They seemed to be thoroughly enjoying this fast moving and entertaining show, and humming its catchy tunes as they emerged from the Opera House to find a taxi . . . They shared our disappointment, however, that Cliff Edwards did not sing again some of his familiar songs with his famous ukulele accompaniment . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell of Beverly Farms were also in holiday mood . . . Mrs. Sortwell wore a taupe Persian lamb cape over her dahlia satin gown . . .

Attending in a small family party were Mr. and Mrs. John Gardiner Flint of Chestnut Hill, the latter in an all black ensemble . . . We also noticed Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Howes, Eddie Casey, former head-coach at Harvard, enjoying the show from a front row seat, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert O. Brown of Brookline in a foursome, Mrs. Harcourt Amory and Mr. and Mrs. Seleck Sears of Milton . . .

CELINA ROBBINS — WILLIAM LITTLE

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

IF THIS were baseball it would be called a double steal, for the cameraman decided to duck out at a recent debutante ball, to steal a smoke, and Celina Robbins and Bill Little stole a few minutes from the dance floor to enjoy a stroll. They happened to meet—then flash! and here is the picture. Celina is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bradford Robbins of Marlborough street.

Ruth Mahoney Is Dorchester Bride

Calla lilies and tall red roses formed an exquisite setting for the wedding yesterday morning of Ruth Mahoney of Dorchester and Francis Drummey Mahony of Readville.

The ceremony . . . which took place at 9 o'clock at St. Matthew's Church in Dorchester . . . was followed by a reception at the Fox and Hounds Club on Beacon street.

Betty Mahoney served as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a period frock of American beauty moire and a matching turban of tulle. Two more sisters . . . Anne and Ruth Mahoney . . . preceded the bride altarward. They were gowned alike in period frocks of ivory moire and carried red chrysanthemums.

Thomas Mahony of Readville was his brother's best man. Ushering at the church were Emery Doyle of Mattapan and John Cummings of Ashmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahony left on a wedding trip to Palm Beach and on their return will be "at home" in West Roxbury. Mrs. Mahony, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Mahoney of Dorchester, is active in Aristos Club affairs.

RECOUNT OPENS IN CAMBRIDGE MAYORALTY

The official sequel to the bitterest Cambridge mayoralty battle in years began today, when a recount of ballots was started by the Cambridge election commission before a crowd of 200 citizens.

Both Mayor-elect John D. Lynch and former Acting Mayor John W. Lyons were on hand to oversee the recount. Lynch defeated Lyons in the recent election by 267 votes.

LYONS LOSES VOTE

The recount of votes in Precincts 1 and 2, Ward 1, was completed before noon.

The only changes recorded were loss of one vote in Precinct 1 by Lyons and discovery of one vote in Precinct 1 for Tregalina Snowball.

Frequent protests made the afternoon of the counting very slow. The election commissioners were called into conference again and again over contested ballots.

OTHER RECOUNTS

The vote stood: Ward 1, Precinct 1—Lyons, 475; Lynch, 338; Angelina Snowball, 1. Precinct 2—Lyons, 413; Lynch, 379; Angelina Snowball, 0.

Two other recounts were also underway, the referendum calling for the sale of the Tuberculosis Hospital to Middlesex County which set by 213 votes and the councillor contest in Ward 8, Cambridge, where Daniel F. Finn defeated James E. Mahoney by 26 votes.

A detail of both State and Cambridge police watched the counting which is expected to last several days.

Mourn Murdered Chum

DOROTHY FRERE JUNE KEESEE

SLAIN GIRL LAID TO REST IN BRIDAL GOWN

Mt. Rainier, Md., Nov. 12 (INS)—Clad inthe white satin dress which was to have been her bridal gown, the battered body of Corinna Loring lay in a casket today in an undertaking establishment while a score of detectives pursued search for her brutal killers.

A church worker and Sunday school teacher, she was to have been married tomorrow to Richard Tear, employe of a government hospital.

Late Saturday, her beaten body was found in a thicket near here. There were wounds on both temples; she had been garroted, and there were tooth marks on one hand.

Held in the local jail for investigation, but with no charges preferred, are Tear, her fiance, and Aubrey Hampton, a government worker, who was at one time a suitor of the girl, and friendly with her family.

Police are convinced that a woman figured in the murder. They are investigating one theory that a discharged patient at the insane hospital where Tear is employed, reputedly infatuated with Tear, had something to do with it.

They are also investigating the theory that the girl may have been slain for from the scene where her body was found.

Both Tear, the fiance, and Hampton, the one-time suitor, have established alibis that have been convincing to the police. They may be released tonight.

Police have not yet questioned the girl's mother, who has been in a state of hysteria since the body was found. Mrs. Loring broke down when she viewed the body of her daughter in the undertaking establishment.

"That's not my girl," she screamed.

PIGS IS MORE PIGS

Swine Heirs Irk Police; 2 Jailed

Dedham, Nov. 12.

"Tom, Tom, the Piper's son, Stole a pig and away he run."
—Ma Goose.

Which made it comparatively simple for the town authorities of the nursery rhyme, "The pig got loose"—and as a result "Tom got put in the calaboose."

And so did Theodore W. and Daniel P. Chamberlain, cousins, of High street, Westwood, when they appeared before Judge Clifford B. Sanborn in Dedham court this morning and pleaded guilty to the larceny of 50—count 'em—50 pigs. They each got four months in the calaboose—otherwise known as the workhouse—when they admitted taking 22 pigs on May 22 and 28 more August 28 from William P. Nickerson's piggery in Westwood.

POLICE CHIEF'S PLIGHT

But—consider the plight they left Chief of Police George C. McGilly in as a result of their "tom-toming" on a wholesale scale.

The chief, who, virtually single-handed, solved the great "pig-napping" case, now finds himself in the same fix as Ellis Parker Butler's celebrated station agent in "Pigs is Pigs." With nervous "english."

Following the complaint of Nickerson, Chief McGilly scouted the country-side near Franklin, Medfield, Wrentham and Westwood for the purloined pigs. And found all but a few of them, identification resulting from earmarks made by Nickerson months ago.

In the case of the May pigs pilfered by the Chamberlain cousins, there had been multiplication in the old-established manner.

WHAT OF PIGS' HEIRS?

Most of the receivers of the pigs stolen by the "Piper's" cousins Chamberlain gave up their ill-gotten gruntera willingly enough. Some didn't and now Judge Sammons has put Police Chief McGilly up against the problem of restoring to their rightful owner not only the original property thefted—but the increase thereof.

The good McGilly's jaw dropped when he learned that the law governing recovery of stolen property contemplates that the receiver must be made to restore not only the money or goods stolen, but "the increase or interest accruing to the receiver of said property."

Which in the case of 50 pigs, calls for computing compound interest beyond the bounds of simple arithmetic.

SALTONSTALL SEES BIG TAX

President Roosevelt and the free spending program of the federal government were sharply criticized today by Speaker of the House Leverett Saltonstall.

"Some day all the spending will have to be paid for by ever more oppressive taxes than the people now bear," the Speaker declared.

Addressing Wellesley Women's Republican Club at the Wellesley Community Playhouse, Saltonstall also asserted Governor Curley had been abusing his appointing power.

This alleged "abuse," the Speaker said, was responsible for the changed voting balance in the Governor's Council, which the people elected as a Republican body, but which now has been switched to a Democratic voting council.

GLORIA OPENS FINAL FIGHT

New York, Nov. 12 (INS)—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, it was learned today, has taken the last legal step left to her to regain custody of her 11-year-old daughter, Gloria.

She has filed with the Court of Appeals a petition asking permission to bring the entire dispute with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, the child's aunt, before that body.

Upon the decision of the Court of Appeals rests Mrs. Vanderbilt's only hope of regaining the guardianship of the little heiress to the fortune left by her father, the late Reginald Vanderbilt.

PASTOR-CRITIC STIRS IRE OF GOVERNOR

Vigorously defending his Armistice Day proclamation, Governor Curley today issued a sharp reply to the criticism made by the Rev. Howard J. Chidley, pastor of the Winchester Congregational Church.

The governor declared that an attempt to throw a political veil around his praise of the Roosevelt administration was "knavish and subtle."

He further maintained that the method of dissecting the proclamation used by the Rev. Mr. Chidley was "most unfortunate, in that it reflects upon the profession which he represents."

The rumpus started when Dr. Chidley extracted a passage of the proclamation and dwelt on it to great length. The paragraph read:

"In the present hour of national distress, we give thanks for a leadership in the nation that is the embodiment of the faith of the leaders who have gone before."

Dr. Chidley said during his sermon:

"I think this is the most flagrant misuse of a governor's proclamation for political purposes I have witnessed in my 28 years minstry in this pulpit."

Police End Slumber Of Auto "Corpse"

The "dead" man talked and the joke was on the police.

Summoned today to Causeway street by report a corpse lay in an automobile near the North Station, officers rushed from their newel cars, flung open the auto door and shook the "deceased" violently.

The "corpse" rolled his eyes and murmured

G. O. P. TO MEET HERE MONDAY

Candidates for state and other elective officers within the G. O. P. will be given an opportunity to show their wares at the semi-annual meeting of the Republican Club of Massachusetts next Monday night at Hotel Statler.

As principal speakers, the club has invited Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, and State Senator William H. McSweeney of Salem.

Expected to be present are District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House, John W. Haigis of Greenfield, Joseph E. Warner of Taunton, announced candidates for governor; also Mark Duff of New Bedford and Jay R. Benton of Belmont, mentioned as possible candidates for the head of the state ticket; Representative Henry Cabot Lodge of Beverly and James P. Cavanagh of Boston, candidate for U. S. senator; Mayor Binnie Weeks of Newton and Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., of Boston, looked upon as potential candidates for senator; Councilor Winfield A. Schuster of Douglas, mentioned as a candidate for lieutenant governor.

ON BOTTOM OF SEA

Moscow, Nov. 12 (AP)—Thousands of fishermen returning from the sea today told an astonishing story of having been marooned on the bottom of the sea for five days, dispatches to this city stated.

Equally astonishing was their report that at the busiest period of the fishing season the sea itself retired from under the fleet.

The sea receded along 150 miles of the northern shore line of the Caspian sea, leaving the boats high and dry several kilometers from solid earth.

Airplanes dropped food to the marooned men until the tide flowed back and allowed them to refloat their ships.

BOGUS-CASH 5 SENTENCED

Five men were sentenced today in federal court at the end of a drive against what federal agents and police termed one of the cleverest counterfeiting rings ever rounded up in this district.

Judge George C. Sweeney sentenced Louis Vera of Prince street, North End, to a year and a day in jail and fined him $1 on a count of conspiracy to pass and utter counterfeit money.

Vera also was sentenced to a year on a charge of passing counterfeit money.

Daniel LePore, Fleet street, North End, was sentenced to six months on the conspiracy charge, as was Jerry Foricelle of Clinton.

Gaetano Diafaria of Leominster, and Roddie Lafort of Clinton were given suspended sentences of 18 months and placed on probation for three years. Lafort was also fined $1.

BILL TO REDUCE PENSION AGE

A bill to reduce the age limit for old age assistance in this state from 70 to 65 years and the required residence in the state from 5 to one years, was filed today with the State House by Representative Charles V. Bogan of Lynn.

The bill also would change the law so that the state's share of the cost of the assistance would be three-fourths instead of one-third as at present.

Bogan said that if the latter change is adopted the state will receive $15 a month for each case from the federal government.

SILENCE GOES WITH SAFETY in the NOISE-PROOF steel body of the new FORD V-8

Beneath the new beauty of lines, fittings, and colors in the Ford V-8 for 1936 lies steel construction that spells safety and lasting quietness.

THE FORD STEEL BODY is welded into one piece. Steel girders reinforce it both top and sides. Safety Glass in every window is standard equipment to further increase your safety. Insulation has been added to give you extra freedom from noise—from heat, from cold. There is no "drumming" in your ears at 20 miles per hour or at 60.

Inside this Ford V-8 for 1936 your eye will find new and more beautiful appointments. There is greater roominess than in many cars costing hundreds of dollars more. The "luxury-car" riding quality of last year's great Ford V-8 has been even further improved in this new Ford.

At the wheel, you will find easier, quieter gear-shifting—steering made easier this year by 25%. Under the hood purrs the proved and improved V-8 engine that now powers over two million Ford V-8's on the road.

Before you buy any new car, discover the values Ford has packed into the 1936 V-8. Come in and see this new car today.

Lovers Despair Facing Delays

SYNOPSIS

Nell Doran could marry Ned Hamilton, junior partner of the insurance company she worked for, but she was terribly in love with penniless, devil-may-care Ricky Calhoun, who didn't even have a job. One day Ricky makes $3 at an odd job and takes Nell out to celebrate.

On the park bench, Nell tells Ricky she wishes she could marry him immediately. "I'm glad you don't get violent about it as I do," Ricky says. "It's good for both of us that you keep your head. Three and a half years is a deuce of a long time to wait!"

At a restaurant, Ricky discusses the possibility of getting a position out of town and ask. Nell if she would go with him. Nell explains that she is her family's mean support—her step-father could not be counted on—and she could not leave her mother and little half-brother, Jimmy, in want.

CHAPTER III

Suddenly Ricky was leaning forward; suddenly he said with gruff violence: "Nell, are you thinking of Ned Hamilton? That sure would be an easy out for you! He could give you a home and take care of your mother and your little brother without ever knowing it. What would $110 a month mean to a lucky guy like Hamilton! If I had any decency I'd step out of the picture and leave you free to marry him, I suppose. You would, of course!"

She wasn't looking at him now. She was holding her eyes on the little plaque she was making and fighting against tears.

Presently, with an impulsive ardor, his hand closed down on hers. "Sorry, dear! Don't get down-hearted. That was a mean stab. And besides I haven't got the job from Lee yet. I may never get it. Let's be on our way. Didn't mean to make you unhappy. Look, I've got a present for you."

She said mistily: "I love presents, Rick. But you shouldn't be so extravagant; so awfully reckless."

"But I am. It's everything or nothing with me. I don't like a wishy-washy middle-of-road."

They got on a crosstown bus at Eighty-sixth street. At First avenue, he said: "It's still light and I've still some time. Let's take a walk over to the river. Such a beautiful night. I want we could take a ride on a boat."

"Kiss Me and Love Me Always," Is Nell's Plea

She added softly, "And look at the moon as we used to do."

"Yeah, when I had a job and was rich on $100 a month. Long time ago, darling."

They entered the park at East End and were soon standing on a bit of rising ground gazing at the silver translucent waters and at the black shadows of Welfare Island.

The boy slipped his arm about her waist and turned her to him: "Nell, there's something of'n troubles me."

She looked anxiously into his face. To her it was the face of a young god, with its heavy light hair slicked back, its sharply cut features, so woefully thin now, and its blue, burning, exciting eyes. She waited for him to continue.

"You don't quite trust me, do you? Sometimes you wonder if I'm worth trusting. Isn't that a fact?"

She was too honest to evade. "It's not that I don't trust you, Ricky, but you're so impetuous. So reckless. You might rush away if things get too hard."

"Nell—I need you to trust me; to believe in me—to KNOW that underneath I'm not a coward or a quitter."

"I believe in you, Rick, as I believe in my own soul. I don't know what would become of me if you failed me."

He had her in both his arms, gripped hard against him. He looked down and spoke with his lips against her cheek. "You're such a little thing, I could crush you so easily. I don't want to hurt you. I don't want ever to do the littlest thing that will make you unhappy. Nell—don't ever let me!"

She saw his eyes glisten. There were tears far back in his eyes. She gave a soft laugh and standing on her toes, offered him her sweet young mouth: "Kiss me and love me always, Ricky dear. You couldn't hurt me. You wouldn't. Only if you left me. Don't ever do that. I couldn't go on, Rick. I wouldn't!"

Nell Feels Ricky's Kiss Like Farewell on Lips

"Dearest, it's you, you only—always—for me!"

A ferryboat was waiting at the slip. He said suddenly, with a look at that boat. It's going across the river. Let's take it. Let's sleep now before something happens to cheat us forever."

She was frightened by the harsh tensity of his voice; by the whiteness of his face and the beating of his heart which she now felt violently against her own.

"Say yes, Nell! I love you. I want you. It's been too long."

She drew away from him in silence She said faintly: "We mustn't."

After a while he ran his hand through his hair, and said bitterly: "I make things hard for you I don't mean to. Nell, I'm late. I've got to hurry now. Good-by, dear!"

He kissed her very gently. She watched as he swung down the slope and up the street; watched until his figure was lost in the gathering shadows. A sudden chill entered her heart. She stood thoughtlessly: "He's gone at together gone!"

And as she walked the short block to her home, she could have wept wildly, feeling his kiss like a last farewell on her lips.

Nell thought, desperately: "I should take him! We can be married. We'll have something to live way!" And she pictured her of running after the impetuous boy, seizing his hand with a pleading: "All right, Ricky, I'll go with you. Ask anything you want, I'll agree!"

But she turned toward the block in East End avenue beyond Eighty-eighth, where, on the top floor of an old three-story brown-stone, her family made its home. It was a quiet block, a nice block.

The houses were all alike They were painted white. Some of the windows were outlined in blue and gay boxes of flowers which were now blooming; some of the doors had gaches and dignity. It was a very respectable home.

But as Nell walked up the four outside steps, she carefully but unconsciously drew a mask over her dreams and her inner, secret spirit. These she shoved far down behind a hidden shutter, keeping them aloof and sacred from the family's attack.

She felt always, as she entered the house, a kind of bombardment—a beating against her of many hostile thoughts, emotions and tongues; the terrible and devastating infringement upon her mind and heart of greedy other lives

Sister Emily Watches Couple With Despair

Tonight, a strange, unusual air of tranquility pervaded the silent house She climbed the three flights of stairs, hoping no one was at home, grateful for the interval.

Her sister Emily called to her from the back porch Emily was ironing — an immense family wash. Also Emily had been looking out the window. She had seen Nell and Ricky enter the park and saunter down toward the river.

She had watched like a spy until they emerged again. Though it was then dusk, she had made out their two figures engulfed by blue shadows. These two figures she had seen drawing together in a long embrace; then drawing apart, though yet holding to each other Things like this made Emily Doran rage with bitterness and despair. She was in a tumult by the time Nell entered and went by herself to a seat on top of the washtub.

"No rest for the weary, is there, Em". Where are Mom and Jimmy?"

"Gone over to Aunt Esther's, thank heaven! He's with them. When alone with her girls always spoke of their step-father as "Him." Though Nell was but six and Emily three when their mother, then a widow of 29, remarried, neither girl had any affection for the man who was all they had even known as a father.

But they both loved the little brother who arrived without welcome from his parents some years later. Henry Mason was handsome, and at that time successful. His ex-daughters hated him and a little feared him. In their childhood he earned well as a small commercial artist and builder.

Their mother always spoke of him as an "architect." And, in fact, he had graduated from some obscure small-town Southern college He never lived down his pretense to culture and to class ground He spoke of his family as though it were closely connected with royalty, and Esther, his sister, had a neat competence from well-invested Government bonds.

The other brother was a minister and the rest defied argument as to their greatness since they had died at birth.

In four years, Henry Mason had earned practically nothing. He, his wife and their ten-year-old son lived on Nell's salary. He loathed Nell for this.

Sweet Honey Recipes

By Martha Lee

You will see honey everywhere you go this week, for it is National Honey Week. Attractive displays have been set up in many stores, with countless suggestions for a wider use of this natural sugar.

Like most staple foods the use of honey was discovered accidently, but ever since it was found centuries ago, it has been used to satisfy man's sweet tooth

"Busy as a bee" is full of meaning when we consider that it requires 10,000 round trips of a honey bee to gather one pound of honey and it takes 20,000 bees to bring in a pound of nectar from the flowers, which makes about one quarter pound of honey

So that it requires 80,000 bees to bring in enough nectar, which when evaporated and modified by the bees, will equal a full pound of honey as it goes to market.

EASY TO DIGEST

Honey is very easy to digest as it is in a form to be assimilated by the system. It is of intense sweetness, and for this reason less of it can be used

There is a great variety in the honey flavors because of the variety of flowers used in gathering the nectar. It is necessary to blend several flavors of honey to maintain a uniformity of flavor and use that is useful for all purposes.

In using honey on waffles or toast it is recommended that it be drizzled—that is, place it in a pitcher of warm water, not hot, for 10 minutes before using Then the honey will be the right consistency to drizzle in tiny threads, instead of pouring in a heavy stream.

One excellent brand of honey comes in a glass bottle, which resembles the cone, making it most attractive for table use

MANY COOKING USES

Honey has many uses in cooking—in breads, cakes and cookies it gives a distinct flavor and keeps the foods moist and fresh It imparts a flavor to vegetables and increases their energy value Add about one teaspoon of honey to a cup of vegetable

It is particularly good on squash baked in the shell, for it adds not only flavor, but moisture. Use about one teaspoon of honey, a tablespoon of butter, salt and pepper over each piece.

Used as a basting for meats—roast chicken and baked ham—it imparts a gloss that is difficult to obtain otherwise. Be sure and try it on meat loaf and on the Thanksgiving turkey.

Honey can be used in many places instead of granulated sugar. Three tablespoons folded into one cup of whipped cream is a delightful sauce for desserts or pies One tablespoon can be used in cracker crust pies in place of the sugar called for in the recipe

HONEY PUMPKIN PIE

3 eggs
1½ cups strained pumpkin
¾ cup honey
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon salt
Pastry

Line a 9-inch pie pan with the pastry. Scald the milk. Beat the eggs until light. To them add the honey, pumpkin and spices. Add the heated milk and pour into the pastry lined pan. Bake at 450 deg F. for 10 minutes, then at 325 deg F. for 30 to 35 minutes.

HONEY BRAN MUFFINS

3 tablespoons shortening
½ cup honey
1-3 cup buttermilk (or sour milk
1 egg (well beaten)
1 cup prepared bran
1 cup flour
¼ tsp. soda
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder.

Cream shortening and honey. Add milk, egg, bran and let soak until most of the liquid is taken up. Sift dry ingredients and add to first mixture, stirring only until the flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full and bake in a moderate oven (425 deg F.) about 25 minutes. 12 small or 8 large muffins.

Diabetes in Children Grows

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I WONDER IF you know that diabetes afflicts the child as well as the adult.

Fortunately, the disease is not common in children.

But it is not pleasant to learn, as indicated by a recent report, that in the United States there are at least a thousand new cases of diabetes in children every year. Doubtless the figure would be greater if we were to take into consideration the many undetected cases. Very often the disease is discovered "just by chance."

Diabetes in children manifests itself in much the same way as it does in the adult. Its presence is determined by the persistence of sugar in the urine and an increased amount of sugar in the blood. A good many times the diabetic child belongs to a family where the disease has attacked both parents and perhaps its grandparents.

SYMPTOMS OF DISEASE

As a rule the diabetic child is taller and heavier than the average boy or girl. Indeed, there may be no outstanding complaints. Frequent urination and persistent thirst are important symptoms not to be overlooked.

Another sign is excellent appetite with inability to gain weight. In the more advanced cases the child is irritable and nervous. All such children are extremely susceptible to infections and contagious diseases.

In cases where there are no conspicuous symptoms a complete physical examination and urinalysis will determine whether diabetes is present.

A mere trace of sugar in the urine does not necessarily indicate diabetes. This may be due to the inclusion of an excess quantity of sugar and fats in the diet. Repeated tests of the urine should be made, as well as occasional examinations of the blood.

Not all cases are true diabetes, of course, but they may indicate a tendency toward the disease. These cases are easily corrected by care of the diet.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

E. B. Q.—What should a girl 13 years old, 4 feet 5 inches tall weigh and a woman 41 years old and 5 feet 3 inches tall?

A.—They should weigh consecutively 87 pounds and 138 pounds as determined by examination of a number of people.

Love Tangle:

Nell's Duty to Self, Say Writers

Nell Doran should "take her happiness!"

That's the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the Boston Evening American readers whose letters, by the hundreds, are pouring in on the Love Problem Contest Editor.

Men and women both seem to feel that Nell's duty to herself and to the boy who had won her heart should come before her duty to her family.

Not all, however, are sure that the heroine of Elenore Meherin's gripping novel, "I Want You Only," can find happiness for herself or for her Ricky by abandoning the kinfolk who, rightly or wrongly, have come to depend upon her.

It's a hard problem, that Nell faces in the story now running serially in the Boston Evening American.

NELL'S PROBLEM

Ricky, the boy Nell loves, has a job offered him in a distant city. He wants Nell to become his wife and accompany him. Her heart tells her to go. The voice of conscience says that she should stay at home, continue to be the support of a worthless stepfather, a weakly incompetent mother, an embittered old maid sister, a beloved younger brother.

For best solutions of Nell's dilemma, the Boston Evening American is offering first and second cash prizes of $10 and $5 and 10 additional prizes of $1 each. Letters must be of not more than 200 words. They should be addressed to the Love Problem Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

Each letter published will win for its writer two free tickets to George White's "Scandals" at the Boston Opera House.

Because of lack of space and the large number of letters which are coming in daily, not all of those under consideration for prize awards can be printed here

MIDNIGHT DEADLINE

There's still time to send in YOUR solution. But the deadline is midnight at 12 noon. Your letter must be postmarked not later than 12 p. m., Tuesday, November 12.

Final award will be announced on Thursday.

Winning a pair of "Scandals" tickets today is the following letter from Marguerite Schumacher 534 Brighton street, Back Bay

"Who would ask a robin to give up its nest in May? Nell should not even think of giving up and yielding in the perfect Spring. Love comes, as the flowers bloom, in God's good time. Poor little Nell should not fear that the leaves and fishes will be tired few. Heaven itself will help. Courage, character and confidence should guide Nell."

CALLS HER BRAINLESS

"You describe Ricky as being ambitious but jobless. Do you mind if I take the liberty of correcting you? It should be ambitious but brainless. That's what I'd call him. He's putting the poor girl 'on the spot.' As sorry as we all feel for Nell, her place is with her family, and I'm sure that the Someone Away Up High will find some way out for the lovers. Before our story is over we will find Nell and Ricky together in old death in front."

The Bible is authority for the solution offered by George A. Sheldon of 67 McCormack avenue Medford. He wins his "Scandals" ticket with this letter:

"I think Nell Doran should marry Rickey and accompany him to a distant city while the bloom is on their love. She could continue to help her family as much as possible.

"The Bible says: 'Intermarry and multiply' and it also says, in substance, 'Leave your parents and cling to your husband or wife.'"

SUGGESTS COMPROMISE

And one final pair of tickets, today, to Kay Lynch, 8804½ Broadway, South Boston. She writes

"Why not compromise? Nell should announce to her family that in six months she is leaving to marry Ricky and that, by that time, it'll be up to the step-father and sister to be finding some kind of jobs, anything that will feed the family."

"In six months, Ricky should be established in his new position, and have some sort of home for her. He will have proven himself before she takes a chance. She would be rather silly to give up her own home and happiness to go with him on what might prove a wild goose chase. If he really loves her, he will come to her and do everything to make their coming marriage a success. Anticipating their reunion will stimulate his enthusiasm and ambition."

Preserve the Eyes of Youth

Bandelettes Relieve Strain and Fatigue

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S A STEADY, year-round job, this business of putting up an elegant front —and this season the eyes seem to have it.

If you notice eyes looking especially sparkling and radiant these first winter nights, they have probably been basking in the magic of a herbal eye pack.

Of all good things of the beauty feast the face gets plenty —cooling astringents, sweetly fragrant creams and lotions. But the eyes, poor things, don't even get the scraps and leavings.

Little wonder then that their dewiness and glitter is soon dimmed. If you believe as we do, that the eyes are the keynote to woman's beauty, you will want to keep them young and radiantly beautiful.

Women who pin their hopes to eye aids are seldom disappointed. A pilgrimage to the beauty marts these days is a thrilling adventure, for opened before the feminine eye are intriguing toiletries —lid shadows to put mystery and seductiveness in starry eyes, creams to nourish the delicate tissues, eye-drops to bring quick relief to inflamed orbs, lotions to cleanse and keep them bright and refreshed.

Since we are living in such a fastidious age, the campaign for beauty must go merrily on. The woman who doesn't step into the pulchritude parade might as well tote out the little ladder and climb up on the shelf

A famous Fifth avenue salon's contribution to the galaxy of eye preparations is a triumph of effectiveness. It is an eye bandelette (or pad) and is unsurpassed for relieving burning, fatigue or strain. It also is used for removing dark shadows beneath the eyes.

These bandelettes are steeped in warm milk or cream and placed over the eyes for five minutes. At the end of that time they are removed and replaced with a pad of absorbent cotton squeezed out in cold water.

To learn the name of these delightful bandelettes which can be either steeped in milk or water, and which magically restores the sparkle to tired, aching eyes, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Patience

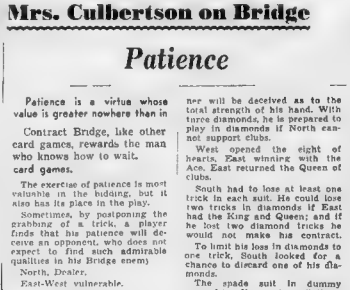
Patience is a virtue whose value is greater nowhere than in Contract Bridge, like other card games, rewards the man who knows how to wait. card games.

The exercise of patience is most valuable in the bidding, but it also has its place in the play.

Sometimes, by postponing the grabbing of a trick, a player finds that his patience will deceive an opponent, who does not expect to find such admirable qualities in his Bridge enemy

North, Dealer.

East-West vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♢	1♡	Pass (1)	1♠ (2)
2♢	2♡	3♣ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) A bid of two in a suit, over an intervening overcall, should not be made without about two honor-tricks.

(2) West's bid is a good one—if he is lucky enough to find his partner unable to bid any more. West's motive, of course, is to make the opponents think he has a good hand, so that they will be hesitant about bidding a game He would be acutely unhappy if East suddenly began to raise spades enthusiastically.

(3) Having passed previously, South does not fear that his partner will be deceived as to the total strength of his hand. With three diamonds, he is prepared to play in diamonds if North cannot support clubs.

West opened the eight of hearts. East winning with the Ace, East returned the Queen of clubs.

South had to lose at least one trick in each suit. He could lose two tricks in diamonds if East had the King and Queen; and if he lost two diamond tricks he would not make his contract.

The spade suit in dummy seemed to offer good possibilities. West had to bid the suit, and it could be depended upon to hold one of the honors

South planned first to lead a spade toward the dummy. If West had the Ace, tricks could be established with both the King and Queen

If East showed up with the spade Ace, South planned to finesse through West for the Jack, and to win two tricks nevertheless.

The Queen of clubs was taken by dummy's King, and a club returned to the Ace. Now South led a spade. West played low and dummy's King was played.

But East was in no hurry about taking his Ace of spades. He nonchalantly ducked, playing the nine under the King.

This convinced South that West held the spade Ace. The Queen of hearts was led from dummy and overtaken by South's King.

Now South led another spade. West's play of a low card set him to puzzling; he is moment, but he stuck to his original plan and put up the Queen. East captured it with the Ace.

South was later forced to lose two diamond tricks, and did not make his contract.

Fashion Flashes

PEASANT blouses of silk lame will be seen on up-and-coming members of the younger set recently, and metallic silk shirtwaist dresses are the current pets for cocktail wear.

One of the most effective evening gowns seen about town is of gun-metal metallized silk moire, the severity of the fabric softened by the slim flowing lines of the dress, girdled in purple and fuschia silk velvet.

Here's Swift and Direct Action to Relieve That Cold

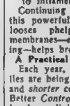
JUST RUB ON AT BEDTIME



Two generations of mothers have proved Vicks VapoRub the most effective treatment for children's colds. VapoRub is external—and safe. Its use avoids the risks of constant internal "dosing" which so often upset digestion and appetite, thus lowering body resistance when most needed.

Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, VapoRub starts to work immediately—two ways at once:

1. By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster—
2. By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, carried by every breath and breathed in direct to inflamed air-passages.

A Practical Guide for Mothers

Each year, more and more families are being helped to fewer colds and shorter colds by Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. Vicks Plan has been clinically tested by practicing physicians, and further proved in everyday home use by millions. Full details of the Plan in each package of Vicks VapoRub.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Gambled Away His Savings

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were engaged for three years and had a joint bank account, with which we hoped to buy and finance a little home.

My girl had a good job, and put money into the joint account as regularly as I did.

For the last two or three months she made the deposits but never wanted to show me our bank statement, and after a while this aroused my suspicion.

I dropped into the bank to ask about the account and was amazed to find out that the money had been withdrawn. My girl had been gambling and had lost the entire amount. I could have forgiven this, if it had not been for the defiant attitude she took.

Later I discovered she had been meeting a young man from a broker's office at lunch, and he was at the bottom of these "investments." Have I any legal redress?

KENNETH.

Your question is one which a lawyer should answer, as banking laws are different in different states, and the proper claims of parties holding a joint bank account will depend on the conditions with which the account was accepted.

Better watch your step in regard to this young lady; she strikes me as a poor matrimonial risk.

WANTS TO KNOW IF MARRIAGE IS A LOTTERY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've heard so much about marriage being a lottery that, though I have been engaged for two years, I hesitate to take the step. What do you think of this question? I'm 26 and my fiance is ten years older. Do you think that is too great a difference in ages?

MABELLE.

Isn't everything in life more or less of a lottery, my dear girl? The house into which you put your life savings—isn't it likely the neighborhood may go up or down, and your property improve or deteriorate?

Will you return in good shape from that motor trip to which you've looked forward so eagerly? Are your friends loyal or disloyal? Will you keep your job?

Life seems to be a succession of lotteries.

As for marriage, the most promising among our friends and acquaintances have gone on the rocks, and the most wildly hazardous have been successful. Not long ago a certain Court of Appeals handed down a decision declaring: "Marriage is not a lottery, but the product of skill and judgment." And ten years is certainly not too great a difference in ages. Call to mind the recent marriage of Senator McAdoo.

HOME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My parents are not like other girls' mothers and fathers. They think a girl should only work and never have any fun at all. I am 19 years old, and the other night two boy friends of mine came to call. They are both very decent and respectable young men, and they were told I was not at home.

After they left, I was called vile names by my mother, father and 16-year-old sister, and they threatened to put me out of the house if I ever spoke to one of these young men again. I made up my mind to leave home, but have not done it yet. I like one of these young men very much, and think it wouldn't be hard to love him.

G. L.

I wish you had been a little more frank with me, my dear girl, and told me the reason your parents objected so strenuously to one of your callers. There must be some serious reason for them to have taken such a stand. If you read this column regularly, you know that I urge parents to let their daughters have their friends come to see them at home.

It is the only way in which mothers and fathers may become acquainted with their daughter's friends, and is so much better than having young girls meet men outside the home. I never can see why parents clamp down so on their girls, when the fact that they are parents is conclusive proof that they must have done some courting and marrying in their day.

PARENTS DISAPPROVE OF HIS FAMILY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm very much in love with a splendid young fellow of 24, who has been supporting himself since he was 15 years of age. He has a fine job, good character and a steady income, but my parents object because his mother and father have been divorced, and his mother has a pretty bad reputation.

Do you think it is fair to condemn him on this account?

MARILYN

It would be most unfair to condemn a young man of good character on account of the shortcomings of his mother. You are not marrying that lady or his father, either. The boy is all the more likely to make you a good husband because his own home life has been unfortunate.

Church AND Reception CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I would like to know whether it is proper for me to present both the invitation to the wedding and the reception when I attend?

F.

Sometimes, when the wedding is to be a large, important one, there is enclosed with the invitation to the ceremony a small church card, requesting that you "present this card" at the church. If so, you of course take this card with you to the ceremony. Otherwise it is not necessary to take any of the invitations you receive for the ceremony or reception.

GREETINGS IN PASSING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Should a gentleman always wait for the lady to speak first, even if he knows the lady well, and they are walking toward each other and they are sure they will speak?

T.

1—When a man and woman meet it is the woman's privilege to bow or speak first. This is the basic rule underlying all of your questions. But there are many circumstances that modify this rule, the chief one being the degree of friendship.

Friends do not stand on ceremony; when they meet the greeting is spontaneous and simultaneous, with no thought of who shall speak first.

But with mere acquaintances, there must be more thought about this, and circumstances must quickly suggest to us what to do or not to do.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

BEAUTY ANSWERS

Question—I am only 25 years of age and already am having foot trouble. I have a number of small corns on my toes. They are rather painful and as I never had any trouble of this sort until recently, I am wondering if I am wearing the wrong type of shoes. For the last year I have been wearing short-vamped shoes. Could this account for the condition of my feet?

ALICE F., Arlington.

Answer—The too short shoe is responsible for many foot ills. If you go in for the short-vamped type be sure to get them a half size larger. This type of shoe is popular today because it makes the foot look small. But unless it is long enough it pushes the flesh on the top of the foot up into an unsightly bulge and also encourages corns. The end of any shoe should extend at least three-fourths of an inch beyond the longest toe. Many shoe shops have X-ray machines which show exactly how the foot appears inside the shoe. It is a good thing, too.

Question—Is it possible to refine a coarse skin? And do you think that such a skin is sometimes hereditary? I am only 19 years of age and have always had a poor complexion—no blackheads or pimples, but a very coarse skin texture. I would give anything if I could have a nice, smooth complexion.

FRANCES A. F., Dorchester.

Answer—Refining a coarse skin isn't easy, but it can be done. The condition is sometimes caused by neglect, or by a diet that contains too much heavy foods, or by lack of water in the system. Yes, I believe that poor skins are often hereditary. Here's a way to refine your skin: Make face pack by mixing almond meal and olive oil. Have it the consistency of whipped cream. Spread on a clean skin surface, place two thicknesses of gauze over the face, lie down for a half hour rest period. Remove the pack with warm water, dry, lave with witch hazel or your favorite astringent. Then skip over the skin with an ice cube. Do it every day for several months.

IS IT HER FAULT SHE DID NOT KNOW?

CHAPTER 496

I NEED NOT have feared for Harriet Braithwaite.

Whatever struggle was hers while I was telling her the story of Edwin's daughter whom she had not dared to own, it was ended, and any rebellion of spirit fully and finally conquered when she looked up at me after the minute of silence that had followed my closing words.

"To think," she said, "that I never would have known the truth if it had not been for you. I know you do not want thanks, but I am going to do something which I know will please you. I am going to put myself in your hands, unreservedly. Tell me what I ought to do, and I will do it—no matter what it is."

I shot a quick, furtive glance at her. Had she guessed the vagrant thought that had come to me and which I had not dared to harbor for fear I would be asking too much of a woman already sorely tried?

"SEE EDWIN IMMEDIATELY"

I could tell nothing from her face, serene now, with calm eyes looking out unafraid upon this new world which had been fashioned for her out of the fates one in which she had been living for so long.

No, I would not voice that thought at first. I told myself there were other things to say and do first.

"You know what to do—far better than I do," I told her; then added as one shook her head in forcible negation, "but if I must tell you," she nodded emphatically—"I should say, 'See Edwin as quickly as possible. Do not delay. He knows that I am telling you this story, and he will be most anxious to hear your verdict.'

"I need not ask you what it will be. You will condone his long—silence—I will not call it deceit—and make him feel that everything is crystal clear between you."

She seized upon one word I had used and repeated it scornfully.

"Condone!" she exclaimed. "Who am I to 'condone' anything in Edwin? If I had been the right kind of wife, he would have told me of this thing when he first learned of it himself."

BLAMES HERSELF

"There must have been a lack of sympathy in me which he sensed," she went on in accents of self-reproach. "If I had only known, I could have planned something. It was so long after the child's birth, and no one ever had guessed her parentage—we might have arranged to adopt her. Then Edwin could have loved his daughter openly."

"But would that have been just to you, Harriet?" I queried, trying to keep the excitement out of my voice. "Could you have loved her?"

"I do not know," she said after a pause. "Probably not as much as Edwin would have cared for her. But—I think—remember, my arms had been empty then for several years, and I had definitely decided that I could not combine motherhood with being the wife of a surgical genius whose career depended upon a life made secure from petty disturbances.

"I—am—quite sure that I could have learned to love the child, all the more—so queer is a woman's heart—because Edwin did not really love her mother."

"I do not think that is queer at all," I said quickly. "It would mean that the element of jealousy would be lacking in the situation."

"I suppose so," she said. Looking at her, I realized that she was talking at random, and that her thoughts had gone far afield.

"I cannot go to Edwin now, can I?" she asked presently.

ASKS MADGE'S AID

"I am afraid not for a few minutes. He was going back to Lee Chow when I came up here. But I'll slip down to that room, and find out just when he can come down here and see you. I'll give him my key, and he can come over here the first chance he has to slip away.

"But don't you think you had better rest a bit? You've been through some pretty harrowing experiences, you know."

"Rest!" she cried scornfully. "I feel as though I never needed rest again. I've had something far better than rest. I've had my husband given back to me. And—I don't want to see him just yet—not until I've had a chance to plan.

"Margaret—help me to find a way to bring Edwin's daughter into our household for the rest of our lives. I must give him his child to love openly, instead of in secret."

A Little Old Lady's Eye Sparkled

In a small Maine town beyond Portland, a little old lady lives. Once of the city, no rolling acres, no expanse of sky can quite make up to her for the human contacts now missing. With her farmer-husband away from the house, she does her work, she pets her dog and she listens for the telephone.

All day, from the washing of the breakfast dishes, through the dusting and the polishing, during the cooking and the planning and the sewing, she listens. Hoping for and anticipating the pleasant tinkle of the bell.

When an afternoon fades into twilight without it, she waits no longer. With a little sparkle in her eye she crosses the worn floor to the telephone.

Sitting on a prim ladder-back chair, leaning forward a bit in eagerness, she gives a number.

Whom does she call? Well, it may be her sister in Bangor. It may be a member of the Current Events class. It may be Mrs. Wilkins who was sick all summer. It doesn't matter. Nor does it matter that the conversation is concerned with crops and weather, recipes, and the next meeting of the Grange. What does matter is that a woman who needs a social contact, who wants to hear a friendly voice, can overcome limitations of time and circumstances by telephone.

In Emergencies

Besides being an almost human companion, the telephone has also helped this woman through three emergencies. And while she may be situated somewhat differently from thousands of other telephone users, her need of companionship is no greater.

For Telephone Information

You can order a telephone, or obtain information about telephone service, in any one of three ways: In Person — By Telephone — By Mail.

If you wish to call your telephone business office from a public telephone, the call is free. Just ask the operator for "Telephone Business Office", and your nickel will be returned to you.

CHAPTER 48

Then came a new order from Moscow and we were all classified in definite groups.

The engineers were again placed in the first group, and, strange as it may seem from the Soviet point of view, the also included business men.

The second category comprised physicians, economists and technical experts. Lawyers were at the very end, in the 12th group.

A month after my arrival at Ust-Sysolsk the engineer Khomlakov died of consumption and two weeks later the engineer Bakhtiarov hanged himself.

Bakhtiarov lived in private quarters and I often dropped in there for a chat.

On my way home from work I passed the house where he rented a room and was always glad to see a light in his window and to stop for an hour for an unreserved talk with this charming man.

Nobody checked up on our time and after work we were free to go about as we pleased. A little later, this freedom was restricted by Moscow.

Bakhtiarov's little room was poorly furnished, but warm, clean and orderly. A kerosene lamp hung on a large hook above the table. It was this lamp that Bakhtiarov made use of in settling his accounts with life.

Bakhtiarov was an engineer of renown and had held a high position in the Soviet coal-mining industry. Several months before the "Shakhta" trial he had been sent abroad on a government mission.

Passing through Berlin on his way home, he received a letter from some of his close friends imploring him not to return to the U.S.S.R.

The letter stated that upon his return he would be arrested and charged, together with his associates, with premeditated "wrecking," for the ultimate purpose of overthrowing the Soviet regime.

Bakhtiarov knew he was perfectly innocent and took the next train to Moscow. A day after his arrival he was arrested. He was tried together with other engineers charged with complicity in the "plot," and was sentenced to be shot for his "wrecking" activities.

The sentence was commuted to a term of ten years in the penal camps.

During his confinement, he had come to the conclusion that the work he had done in the last ten years was harmful rather than useful to Russia and the Russian people; and that as long as he continued to work for the Bolsheviks at the penal camps and to add his mite to the realization of their plans, he was harming his country.

The only logical thing to do was to put an end to this work.

He talked to me for two hours before committing suicide:

"Thanks to my work and the work of other engineers and experts," he said, "the Bolsheviks are enabled to continue the achievement of their plans and wage their war against the people, the majority of whom are against them. Why should I help them?

"I have already committed an unpardonable sin by indirectly helping to support the Bolsheviks during all the years I have worked for them.

"Have I the moral right to continue? No. Therefore I should refuse to work, shouldn't I?

"If I decline to perform tasks given me in my professional capacity, I shall be sent back to the forest, or thrown into the dungeon, or shall be tried again and shot.

"To escape these eventualities, I prefer to put an end to it myself. I have thought about it for a long time and it is the only way out.

"Besides I am old. I have lived my life, and it is time to quit."

I tried to reason with him as one normally does in such cases. He looked at me sadly.

"No, my friend, I am resolved. I am talking to you in all earnestness. At midnight I shall hang myself. Good-bye."

He shook hands with me and led me to the door.

I could not take his gloomy words literally. Again asking him to dismiss the thought of suicide from his mind, I left his doorstep and stepped out into the dark.

I remember stopping twice on my way home, in obedience to a vague impulse bidding me to return. The second time I even turned back and took several steps, but overcame my feeling of weakness and went back to our little chapel.

The first thing I heard the next morning was the news of Bakhtiarov's suicide. He left no note.

Bakhtiarov's death left a deep impression on me and often made me think of his views as to where the responsibility for the Russian tragedy rested. He thought the Russian intelligentsia was chiefly to blame for it.

He was quite adamant on the theory that the intelligentsia had done more than anybody else in bring the country under the Bolsheviks' domination and to enable them to conduct their experiment in it.

Bakhtiarov thought that the former established classes of society, such as the landed nobility, peasants, laboring classes, merchants, manufacturers and petty bourgeois, were responsible only in a minor way for the Bolshevik revolution and, except for the industrial workers, had taken no active part in it.

His indictment, however, was directed at the intelligentsia of Russia.

"The intelligentsia was the brains of the people. It had innumerable points of contact through which it reached and influenced all classes.

"During several decades preceding the revolution it sought passionately to overthrow the Czarist tyranny. It conducted a subversive propaganda by means of the press, literature, schools, public and private discussions.

"It never gave a thought to what was going to follow the Czar's regime. It did not understand the basic character of the Russian people. It had no notion how to govern them.

"It idealized the people and lived in a stratosphere of dreams from which it could not see the disintegrating effects of its own activity.

"Part of the intelligentsia was devoted to revolutionary and Marxist theories, and actively fought the existing authorities by seditious propaganda among the workers and peasants, and by acts of terrorism against the Czar, his ministers and governors.

"Another part, the more numerous groups of parlor radicals, juggled with liberal and democratic ideas, criticized and poked fun at the authorities, and in the final analysis did as much harm as the first.

"The intelligentsia was composed of men of all classes and each one devitalized his associates in his own sphere of life.

"It maintained a sceptical attitude toward religion, but offered nothing in its place. Religion was the chief source of moral restraint for the Russian people who were generally deficient in a feeling for legal justice and equity.

"Therefore, by taking away the people's religion, ignoring their inborn peculiarities and the nation's historical traditions, it led the people to an abyss, seducing them by Utopian dreams and hopes.

"What did the members of the intelligentsia do when the storm broke, destroying everything in its path? They went to work for the new rulers of Russia.

"They did not rise in arms against the tyrants, but entered their services. They offered their knowledge and their skill to the debauchers, they prostituted themselves.

"They even stopped criticizing the dictatorship; criticism was punished by execution or exile. Some of them went abroad and even there continued to spread discord in the ranks of the emigres.

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS

All the boys and girls who took part in the first of the six monthly indoor model plane flying contests for Junior Birdmen are expected to be on hand Saturday for the second meet when members will compete with stick models for cash prizes.

The contest will be held at South Armory from 9:30 a. m. until 1 p. m. All flights will be for endurance and time registered will apply toward totals to be computed at the end of the series when three trophies will be awarded to the first place winners. Another prize will be the control Saturday that all rules governing a wing tournament will be enforced. These will include the rule against gliders or other types of planes being flown while the meet is on.

Charles Freeman

Among the members who are expected to compete are: Charles Freeman, 17, 64 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury; Manual Ford, Leonard Wiltenberg, David Saidel, John Crowley, and Leroy Maia, also of Roxbury; Arthur Sampson, Sidney Wallerstein and Sanford Orringer of Dorchester, Frank A Barrett, Jr., Kenneth Budgell and Robert and William Shea of Brighton.

Louis B. Young of Newtonville; Torrey L. Capo of Quincy; Bruno P. Marchi of Medford; David Adelstone of Mansfield; Jack Golden of Brookline; Lawrence Kruger of Roslindale and Wilbur Tyler of Everett.

Members of the Louise Wheeler Sky Girls' squadron of Belmont probably will be on hand. They include Barbara Keith, commander, and Rhea Doucette, Alice Heyd and Marion and Charlotte Chase.

FAMILIES SHIFT IN SLUM WAR

Many Cambridge families today settled in new homes.

They were residents of houses to be demolished in two weeks for the ERA housing project.

One hundred families on welfare rolls are still in their old homes but will be moved before the end of the week.

The city pays one month's rent in two for them and it is most difficult to find landlords willing to take them.

Beano Announcer

Representative Bernard Casey is to be the official announcer at a Beano Party to be held tomorrow night at English High school hall. The party is sponsored by St. Clement's Guild.

Crime Problems To Be Discussed

In an effort to solve problems that beset youthful criminals probation officers from all parts of the state are to meet here a week from today.

Governor Curley, federal officials, members of the judiciary and local penal officials will join in drawing up a program to correct the criminal tendencies of delinquent juveniles.

SECOND SECTION 15 TUESDAY NOVEMBER 12, 1935

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Dreadful news from Canada! One of the greatest inspirations of American youth and Hollywood directors is going modern and mechanized. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police is to be no longer equestrian. No longer shall we see the figure of a lone Mounty photographed against the sky, surrounded by miles of drifting snow, as he shades his eyes with his hand, seeking the tracks of Trapper Jules, who has murder on his conscience.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

But maybe we shall not miss the pose after all. One suspects that the films will keep right on peddling the Mounty of other days, horse and all, in spite of what the Mounties' commander recently disclosed to the press.

Legends and traditions die hard, and whatever the Mounty may actually look like nowadays, the legend of the lean, hard-bitten scarlet trooper on a splendid horse making his lonely way toward the Arctic Circle to the predetermined end of the story will probably not suffer just because of a few facts.

One Hundred Mounties To Each and Every Horse

Perish the thought that we should see the Mounty using any other but the time-hallowed method of transportation. It may be true that the modern force numbers three thousand troopers and only three hundred horses—or about one hundred men on each horse—but it will be a long time before the pulps and the films accept those statistics.

Nor shall be accept the Mounties on their speedy, modern methods of transportaion—automobiles, motorcycles, motorboats and airplanes, made necessary by new speed on the part of the world of lawlessness and crime. Eskimo sledge-dogs, yes, and occasionally snowshoes or skis, as the weary trooper is on the last lap of hunting down the exhausted villain. But we want to see them still galloping along the ridges of the Canadian Rockies against the setting sun.

Hero Worship Keeps The Rookies on Their Toes

The commander doesn't object so much to this American hero worship, he says. It keeps the rookies on their toes, keeps up the morale of the corps. But when it comes to putting a scarlet-uniformed chorus of the R. C. M. P. to singing and dancing on a musical comedy, as in "Rose Marie" of blessed meamory, that seems to the distinguished Britisher something not unlike lese-majeste or something. I do not remember hearing any protest when our own Texas Rangers, "rootin' lads,. tootin' lads, shootin' lads," were set to singing in "Rio Rita," but perhaps we are not quite such sticklers for dignity here in this country.

But if the Mounties are likely to uphold the old tradition in fiction and the pictures for a long time to come, I must bewail an even greater loss to the arts of fiction and the drama in our own country.

What has become of the Marines? The Marines who were always landing, and who had the situation well in hand? The phrase survives for the most incongruous purposes, but when do we ever see them on stage or screen? Once they were as common as the villain foreclosing the mortgage or the old squire turning his daughter out into the snow.

Decline of Stage Due to Lack of Marines

Hardly a musical comedy without a Marine lieutenant in white drill, bursting in with his devil dogs at the last moment before the revolutionists attack the American consulate to kidnap the heroine for that devil incarnate, Senor (or Don) Jose, the bandit. Even as recently as the production of Richard Harding Davis' "The Dictator," with Willie Collier in the title role, there was a wow finish brought in just that way.

But I haven't seen a Marine now since Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe eked out the adventures of Quirt and Flagg with a little Marine local color.

Anway, drama isn't drama any more without the Marines. But the Mounties will endure unless Hollywood decides that a mechanized Royal Canadian Mounted Police will furnish more excitement than horses in blizzards can possibly do. In their Valhalls of the films they will still get their men in the same old way, with a closeup against the sunset and a final clinch with a voyageur's lovely daughter. Thank heaven, some things are immortal!

Victims of Gas Main Leak

Mrs. Donald Cameron of Bow street, Everett, is treating her daughter, Mary, four, as the latter recovers from effects of inhaling illuminating gas fumes, escaping from a leaky main in the area bounded by Charles court and Langdon and Beacham streets, Everett.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

Near collapse from inhaling gas fumes but refusing hospital treatment is Millie C. Bouvier, 23, of Beacham street, Everett. She is one of a score of victims of a leaky main which drove 50 families from their homes.

Chelsea Watched Closely

Heavy balloting, despite the fog and drizzle, marked the early hours of elections and primaries today in Massachusetts cities.

Particularly heavy was the early vote in Chelsea, center of interest because today's results were expected to be the answer to alleged bartering of state jobs for votes by Representative William H. Melley.

Another contest being watched closely was that for mayoralty nominations in the primaries at Newburyport, where Andrew J. "Boozy" Gillis is attempting a comeback.

This and a battle by 31 candidates for 10 city councillor-at-large nominations, were credited for the heavy early balloting in Newburyport.

CHELSEA VOTE HEAVY

At Chelsea, polling booth workers said the voting in the first hour was heavier even than the primaries balloting last month, when 12,000 votes were cast, highest in history.

Voters in 10 Massachusetts cities are at the polls today, but with only Chelsea and Woburn holding municipal elections. In the other cities, primaries are being held to choose candidates for the election fights in December.

In the Chelsea primaries, Melley ran 4000 votes behind his opponent, Attorney Edward J. Voke.

Since then the campaign has been bitter, increasingly so in the past few days after Melley handed out some 300 state jobs to supporters.

The campaign wound up last night in a burst of red fire, sound wagons and impassioned oratory by the two candidates and supporters.

KEEP CLOSE WATCH

Chelsea police and state supervisors are keeping a close watch today on the balloting, with 83 per cent of the registered vote of 16,515 expected to visit the polls.

In contrast, Woburn was quiet last night, the outstanding activity being a "reception"—not a rally—for Mayor Edward W. Kenney, Democrat.

He seeks re-election, and is opposed by Sherwood VanTassel, Republican.

Chelsea residents are also voting for aldermen and school committeemen, while minor city officials are also being chosen in Woburn.

MAYOR PRIMARIES

Mayoralty primaries are being held in Brockton, Newburyport, Taunton and Westfield. Off-year primary contests are underway in Quincy, Peabody, Haverhill and Gardner.

Newburyport's primary has former Mayor Gillis battling three other candidates for the mayoralty nomination.

They are George G. Ladd, 28-year-old Harvard graduate, and City Councillors John M. Kelleher and Clarence E. Forge.

Brockton has seven mayoralty candidates, three Republicans and four Democrats.

Republican contenders are Mayor Horace C. Baker, Mrs. Florence M. Bartlett and former alderman Fred D. Rowe.

Seeking the Democratic nomination are City Solicitor Lawrence E. Crowley, Daniel K. Collins and Alderman Daniel L. Kelleher and Charles McCaffrey.

Westfield also has a woman mayoralty condidate in Mrs. Alice D. Burke, school committee member. She is opposing Mayor Raymond H. Cowing and Councilman George E. Brady.

Quincy chooses candidates for city council and school committee as does Peabody.

Plans for Quiet Wedding

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Because of illness in the bride-to-be's family, the marriage of Miss Priscilla Saltonstall and Ephron Catlin, 3d, will take place next week instead of in the spring. Miss Saltonstall is the daughter of John L. Saltonstall and Mrs. J. Henry H. Billings of Rhinebeck-on-the-Hudson.

Gas Fumes Rout 150 In Everett; 3 Ill

Seeping from a broken main, fumes of illuminating gas today drove 50 families into the rain and sent three persons, including a 12-year-old girl, to the hospital in Everett.

Several others were overcome by fumes, but revived after treatment with inhalators by polic and firemen.

Some 150 persons, many of them children, were driven from their homes and stood shivering in the rain as the gas spread through the neighborhood.

Special details of police circulated through the area bounded by Langdon and Beacham streets and Charles court, warning persons against lighting matches and searching homes for possible victims.

At Whidden Memorial Hospital in a serious condition from gas inhalation are Victor Veloise, 42, of Bow street, formerly a boxer under the name "Frankie Ryan"; his wife, Margaret, 40, and their daughter, Catherine, 12.

EDWARD J. VOKE — HARRY VERNAR — EDWARD MEKELBURG — WILLIAM H. MELLEY

Casting their respective ballots for "best man" in Chelsea's mayoralty election today are rival candidates Edward J. Voke and William H. Melley. It seems a confident smile with which the former, a leader in the primaries, greets his well-wishers after having registered his vote. In the group with Candidate Melley, as he drops [illegible] in the box, are Harry Vernar and Edward Mekelburg.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

A convict's life was "not a happy one" when John Boyle began manufacturing jail cell equipment in Cambridge 20 years ago. Folks had ideas about criminals

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Times have changed. Cells that used to be six feet by six are eight feet by nine and one-half. Old style cots had no mattresses. The new ones have mattresses three inches thick.

Cots are frequently chromium-plated. They work on hinges to give inmates of the cells more room. Washbowls are built into the walls. And there are artistic lighting arrangements.

Mr. Boyle says he's never had a complaint from a criminal about his interior decorating. He believes better facilities make for reform among the prisoners.

Some die-hards think otherwise. They seem to think such fancy facilities make convicts resigned to going back. I wouldn't know!

Austen Lake

AFTER A FEW MORE YEARS of taking it on the whiskers I am wondering whether Harvard will not repent its blue-nose puritanism and decide to hustle after its share of football business. As one of the country's oldest football firms, Harvard has steadily lost its customer trade to mail order institutions who fan the schoolboy bushes for big hairy barbarians and sell them back to the public at top prices.

It is pretty clear by now that if Harvard wishes to play to packed houses and pay itself some dividends, it will have to scale down its notion of football ethics and copy some of its competitors' tactics by setting up chains of alumni recruiting stations.

It would be a pretty simple matter for President James B. Conant to skin off some leaves from his two hundred million endowment and tell Bill Bingham to go buy himself the best schoolboy bulls he could find. These could be slipped through the college freight entrance next autumn and turned out with secret scholarships and cash subsidies that would be accounted for on a separate set of ledgers.

The football public and press, which is not finicky about ethics, could be told that, by some strange coincidence, a wealth of freshman material had busted through the crust of high entrance standards and would be available to the varsity next year.

Formula for Happiness

AND IT WOULD BE EASY for Bingham to send out confidential orders to the various branch alumni clubs, placing blank scholarships at their disposal and saying that he would not be offended if the recipient was a 200-pound triple-threat fullback with a scrub-board stomach and a size 20 neck.

This is commonly done elsewhere. Just as it is customary for varsity coaches to make summer excursions along the Atlantic seaboard and bag their annual freshman crop, enrolling the kids at no personal cost in a meat-cutting course with occasional classes in chair-caning or steam-fitting.

It does not hurt the athletic kids' morals and, since they are often beefy sons of immigrant parents who are glad to be relieved of their support, it is a worthy charitable work. The colleges get back their investment in winning teams and increased turnstile profits, the public is diverted, and the coaches gain fame as technical wizards with their pictures in the paper and cash rewards for endorsing advertising and authoring spooky articles.

* * *

EVERYBODY IS HAPPY, that is, except the occasional college opponent which adheres strictly to the pious rules of amateurism and restricts its recruiting to falling down on its knees at night and praying please, God, send us a pair of meaty tackles and a couple of husky halfbacks, but please make them bright scholars who can keep their ears above the academic tide.

The results are seldom satisfying. So the pious institution fields a team of wispy kids with peach-fuzz chins and chorus-girl frames who take savage lickings from the barbarians, and come in with the gold pants torn and looking as though the moths have been at them.

My point is that it is unfair to Harvard's innocent types to expose their skins and skeletons to the batterings of an enemy that is hand-picked for its gorilla strength. And, while it is nice to be a candle ligh of virtue in a naughty world, there is a limit in the amount of punishment its innocents should be required to soak up without receiving any salaries, free board or job concessions.

Harvard, Too, Had Its Barbarians

MOST COLLEGES, BEING FRANKLY in the public amusement business for the revenue, free sport-page advertising and increased enrollment, have a selected list of campus and town jobs which are controlled by its athletic officers.

A large proportion of others are blessed with sugar daddies, alumni angels who have enough surplus cash to feed the college sport kitty and support its indigent but burly athletes. Harvard used to have some such setup during the P. D. Haughton era, when P. D. drew an undercover alumni bonus and some of his huskies received wages that were out of proportion for the labors rendered.

And then it was something pretty significant for a rival college team to win a game. Harvard administered rough-house lickings to the visiting yokels. Its guest sections were crammed with payloads of customers and it had a black list for alumni who transferred the golden privilege of paying $3.30 for seats in the colonnade. Its big games were sell-outs, restricted to the immediate university family and the public had to be satisfied with such pot-boiling contests as the Bates and Springfield routines.

Times Have Changed

IT IS PLAIN THAT IF Dick Harlow, who is a master-teacher with a long record of success, cannot lift Harvard football back to the heights of glory, nobody can.

The answer is obvious. Until Harvard does unto its neighbors as its neighbors are doing unto Harvard, i. e., fish in a swarm of shaggy grizzlies, the teams will continue to lose nobly, but indubitably.

Having a million-dollar plant to support, a money-hungry Phys. Ed program to run, and a flock of minor-sport dependents, it is quite a problem. Requiring a large football income to meet its household expenses, Harvard has to maintain a schedule of big money games with opponents of easier morals. In other words, it is as much in the public amusement business as any of its less ethical rivals, without permitting itself the advantages of the recruiting methods. Thus it is between the princess of vice and virtue.

So, after a few more years of taking it on the chin, I am wondering whether Harvard will not repent its blue-nose puritanism and decide to hustle for its share of the football trade by offering the best of the local school kids the King's shilling in return for commercial loyalty and the rent of their bolster bodies.

Neck and Neck

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

A crowd of 55,000 Armistice Day pleasure seekers stormed Narragansett Park to bet $855,863 on the eight races on the program. Part of the tremendous throng can be seen above anxiously waiting for the finish of the big race. This event provided one of the big thrills of the afternoon. Ajaccio, odds on favorite, battled with Crossbow II neck and neck down the stretch. Ajaccio came from behind to beat the 5-to-1 shot and chalk up another victory for Dave Wilson.

B. U. Sport Heads Favor Olympic Participation

Three of the four Boston University major athletic heads favor the United States entering a team in the 1936 Olympics in Germany, according to a poll announced today in the Boston University News, student publication.

The fourth, Dr. Wayland F. Vaughan, professor of philosophy and hockey coach, believes the United States should stay out.

Dr. Vaughan declared:

"It is inconsistent with American sportsmanship and fair play for the United States to participate in the 1936 Olympics in Germany.

"I don't see how the games can be fairly and impartially carried on when politics is uppermost in the Nazi mind."

Dr. John M. Harmon, director of athletics, Win Marling, track coach, and Coach Larow "Pat" Henley of the football eleven, favor participation.

Director Harmon said:

"We should handle this problem as an Olympic one. The United States should abide by the decision of the International Olympic Committee in regard to the alleged racial discrimination in Germany.

"If other nations desire to send teams to participate, we should follow suit."

"I am in favor of the United States' entrance in the 1936 Olympics at Germany because I believe that the Olympics is an athletic ideal. And I believe that America should live up to that ideal.

Gansett 'Take' of $855,863 $12,624 Below Record

By Jack Conway

A million dollar mutuel handle, the dream of Walter O'Hara, would have been realized at Narragansett Park on Armistice Day if everybody who had money to bet had been able to get to a seller's window.

The great crowd of more than 55,000 persons wagered $855,863 against the Labor Day record of $868,487. The Armistice Day mark was $12,624 below the figure established on Labor Day.

It was $107,502 greater than the mark of $748,502 set up a year ago on Armistice Day.

The congestion was so great at Narragansett Park on the holiday that thousands of persons were unable to purchase mutuel tickets.

I believe that with additional temporary mutuel booths located away from the congested grandstand and clubhouse areas, the handle on the holiday would have been at least $150,000 larger. This would have meant a million dollar handle.

The increase in betting over a year ago indicates New England has not tired of trying to pick the horses right.

'Gansett Handle
First race	$52,795
Second race	90,244
Third race	98,428
Fourth race	117,933
Daily double	22,436
Fifth race	119,337
Sixth race	119,011
Seventh race	119,690
Eighth race	116,900
Total	$855,863

TRAIN LATE

Suffolk Downs and Agawam, new tracks this year, helped to create additional racing fans. Many of these new race goers were at Narragansett Park on the holiday trying to call them right.

It was necessary to have an early post time of 1 p. m. because of the big crowd and also because the days are becoming shorter. The first train from Boston did not reach Narragansett Park until after the daily double had closed and the horses were on the track for the first race.

There was $53,795 wagered on the first race and $12,450 bet on the daily double. These figures would have been much larger if the first special from Boston had arrived on time.

There were other thousands who arrived at Narragansett Park after the racing program was well underway. The mutuel clerks could not keep up with the mad betting pace of the holiday crowd.

There are always thousands of inexperienced bettors at a race track on a holiday. They take more time in placing and collecting bets than do those persons who are more familiar with the pari-mutuel system of betting.

Most of the clerks in the mutuel department are merely employed temporarily, and they do not handle money with the same speed shown by professional ticket sellers and cashiers.

The fact the cashiers have to make good any losses due to overpayments has a tendency to make inexperienced help slow.

Narragansett Park continues to set the pace for other New England race tracks.

Walter O'Hara's Pot of Gold has a fine location. It is easy to get to from any part of Rhode Island, Massachusetts or Connecticut.

Four car highways make conditions as comfortable as possible for autoists, while the New Haven Railroad has first class transportation to the track.

In addition to New England money, Narragansett always gets a good play from New Yorkers. Rhode Island resorts have always been popular with New Yorkers, and most of them are big bettors.

The $100 windows get a bigger play at Narragansett Park than at any other New England track. Those persons who frequent the clubhouse at Narragansett Park are more anxious to wager on the various races than to make it a social day at the track.

GIVE IT UP

Before Narragansett Park opened, Walter O'Hara told me he would be very happy with crowds of 25,000 to 30,000 persons on his big days.

He never dreamed at the time that his magnificent racing

Horse Racing on Wane? Neigh, Neigh

By BOB AHEARN

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Nov. 12—Little Johnny Deering was the idol of the Armistice Day gathering of 50,000 that thronged every nook and corner of the grandstand and club house.

Deering, apprentice rider under contract to Joe Roberts, rode the winning hangtails in the first and third numbers, completing the daily double of So High and Dark Devil. For a $2 investment in the double, Deering backers were rewarded with the tidy sum of $1,642.80.

The long shot players will change their cry for Get-Away week from "Tab Stout for winners," to "play Deering."

Four women trainers are quartered here, something no other track can boast. Judy Johnson checked in with her one-horse stable of Lafavich. Others here are Mary Hirsch, Hanbla Bauer and Margaret Henderson. Racing Secretary Pat Horgan may stage a race for thoroughbreds trained by the weaker sex. It would be a worthwhile feature of an original nature.

Walter O'Hara's oval continues to set the pace for mutuel handles. Armistice Day's take of $855,863 was a first class answer to those critics who said horse racing in New England was on the wane.

About twenty horses will be offered for sale at the public auction here Friday. Frank Whitman, veteran auctioneer from Putnam, Conn., will preside at the sale.

Jimmy Stout, leading rider of the local jockey colony, heads for Miami at the conclusion of the Fall session. Stout is the idol of New England race goers. They'll be following the Gotham lad in his winter efforts.

Mr. Boston Alex Has Puff for Numa

By JACK CONWAY

ALEX MacLEAN, who has been around sports as man and boy for these many years, was talking about the Leo Numa-Danno O'Mahoney wrestling bout at the Garden on Friday night.

"Numa is the perfect athlete," said MacLean. "I had a good opportunity to study him during the days he was starring as the 'Black Secret' at my shows at the Arena.

"Numa is built perfectly. Six feet, one inch tall, he weighs 220 pounds. He does not carry an ounce of extra weight. It is all bone and muscle.

"Numa at the age of 27 has his full strength. Tunney was 28 when he defeated Jack Dempsey, while many other heavyweights have reached their peak when 27 to 29 years of age.

"Numa has been wrestling for five years, and has opposed some of the best grapplers in the country. He has not lost a match this year. As a result he has great confidence in his ability to upset O'Mahoney on Friday night.

"I think Numa will win the title. He will be in better condition than O'Mahoney. Leo has been training in Boston for a week, while Danno has been wrestling in different parts of the country.

"Numa will make a splendid champion. In addition to being a great wrestler, he has crowd appeal.

"You will find this out when he opposes O'Mahoney. I know many people who will be down around the ring rooting for Numa to lift the title.

"O'Mahoney won't be able to move Numa around as he has some of the mat veterans he has defeated. He will find Numa the most powerful man he has met."

• • •

JOHNSON TOPS

MacLEAN insists Jack Johnson was a better fighter than Joe Louis. This may be natural in view of the fact MacLean managed Johnson during the latter's tour of Australia.

MacLean found Johnson working in a livery stable in Revere, and developed him into a contender for the heavyweight championship. MacLean and Johnson reached the parting of the ways before the latter became champion.

"Johnson was not as fiery a fighter as Langford," said MacLean, "but in my opinion he was the best colored heavyweight of all time.

"Johnson was a marvelous counter fighter. If you missed, you were liable to have your head knocked off.

"Langford was more aggressive than Johnson and as a result a better crowd pleaser. Sam never saw the day when he could have licked Johnson.

"Louis is a good boxer, but he lacks the punch of Langford or Johnson. He was obliged to hit the defenseless Barr repeatedly before he was able to knock him out."

• • •

JACK SHARKEY

I ASKED MacLean how he thought Jack Sharkey would fare in his scheduled bout with Uncle Winston at a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden on November 22.

"Sharkey will not know just how good he is until he has been under fire in the ring," said MacLean. "He has been away from the ring years for two years, and it will take the Winston bout for the former champion to get a line on himself.

"When I was a bicycle rider, I once took a layoff for a year. I staged a comeback in Australia. I kept up with the leaders until the final spurt. I cut loose with everything I had, but it wasn't quite good enough to win.

"Sharkey is the best natural boxer the heavyweight class has had in the last dozen years. He was always particularly effective with his left hand. He has been hitting hard with his left in his gym workouts. This punch will enable him to offset Winston's looping right hand smash.

"Sharkey will probably find he has lost some of his old speed, but he will hit harder. When Jack bobbed into the heavyweight picture, he was a heavy puncher. He lost some of his wallop when he developed speed and skill.

"If Sharkey can win three or four bouts, he will be the best man to determine just how good a fighter Loolis really is. I'm still from Missouri on the Brown Bomber.

"I think with the public eager to see a first class heavyweight come to the front the fans and sports writers have gone overboard on Louis."

Crisler Proves Old Play Still Clicks

SHORT KICK FORMATION BAFFLES HARVARD

Harvard Polishes Offense for Yale

Short-Kick Formation

TIGERS USED THIS AGAINST HARVARD

By L. B. "Pat" Hanley

Head Coach at Boston University

(Copyright by Boston Evening American)

Despite the frills and fancy formations in modern football, the old standby—the short kick—is still as popular as ever.

Some colleges run a series of basic plays from a regular kick formation and at other institutions they bring the deep man up closer to have a short kick formation.

Fritz Crisler at Princeton uses the formation a great deal in addition to his single wingback, and has great success with it.

The play we show today and diagram is an end run from the short kick formation with White, Princeton's brilliant halfback carrying the ball. The photo is an actual shot of the Princeton-Harvard game last Saturday and it gives you an excellent idea of the Tigers' power.

Here you see White starting toward his right end. Notice the men he has ahead to clear the way for him. The Tigers used this play with great success all afternoon.

This short kick formation enables the offense to mass much power in front of the ball carrier and if you have the men ahead who will block, the plays should work successfully all afternoon.

Now, as a warning to club teams who have been using the plays which have been running in this series, do not try to use too many different formations.

To date I have shown single, double and triple wingback formations and the "Notre Dame box," plus today's short kick. It would be wise to select the short kick and one other formation and from these two you can run enough plays to give any team a successful offense

Air Raids Portend Trouble for Eli

And Adzigian Will Be Ready

By Win Brooks

Looking beyond the New Hampshire game Saturday, Harvard today began polishing an offense for, Yale in the Stadium two weeks hence.

A win for the Harlow-yards will be no upset to those who have watched the Crimson's steady week-by-week progress in the absorption of the Dick Harlow system.

Its attack was distinctly improved, and its running, passing, sure-fire ground gainers, just failed to click.

Two weeks devoted to developing the precision of these passes, launched while the passer is on the dead run just behind the line of scrimmage on either wing, will mean plenty of trouble for Yale.

Adzigian will be ready, and Moseley is back in something like the form that he flirted in predictions of a brilliant future for this shifty halfback.

MORALE HIGH

His muff of a twisting Tiger punt Saturday was excusable; the whole Princeton line was down under every kick. The only wonder is that his was the only costly fumble.

The squad's morale was not by any means blasted by the one-sided Tiger victory; all recognized the fact that they were opposed by a "super" team.

Captain Shaun Kelly, as usual, fought his heart out, and it speaks well for the Crimson courage that in the last quarter, beaten beyond the point where even a miracle would have changed the result, the team advanced from its own zone line beyond midfield in a desperate fight to score.

There is a tangible feeling at Harvard, among the players themselves, among the undergraduate body and the faculty, that Harlow, up against all manner of bad breaks in his first coaching season, has done an excellent job and that next year the results will be apparent.

This is a feeling shared by the Crimson alumni, insofar as any reaction is obvious in this quarter, and Harvard alumni are not easily satisfied.

A win for Harvard in the Yale game will put the first Harlow season in the "successful" class regardless of the outcome of other games, and certainly point up the Crimson outlook for next year

TIGER STRIPES

In the locker building outside Palmer there is a large sign "Yale 7, Princeton 0." It is the safeguard against Tiger overconfidence and it will be in the Princeton dressing room at New Haven for the Yale game . . .

• • •

Big right guard Montgomery, a junior, is slated at present for the Tiger football captaincy in 1936.

Although the prints rarely mention him, the squad acclaims him as the best Tiger on the field and the player responsible for those big center-line holes through which the backs gain consistently on one-side-step delayed bucks.

Garry LeVan, the strutting spook from Steubenville, is being saved for Dartmouth. He pulled three ribs free from their cartilage against Cornell, but will be ready to go against the Indians. There is a campus report he may not go out for baseball this spring.

• • •

Speaking of baseball, the Dartmouth-Princeton rivalry is just as sharp as on the gridiron this year because the Tiger nine hopes to make a Japan trip next summer and Dartmouth is also angling in that direction.

Mustangs Smother Uclans

By MAXWELL STILES

Los Angeles, Nov. 12 (U8)—Lone Star riders of the purple sage stalked a befuddled bruin to his lair with a brilliant display of ground and aerial play, as Southern Methodist University defeated University of California at Los Angeles, 21 to 0, in the annual Armistice Day game here.

Undefeated and untied, and scored upon but twice, the mighty Mustangs of Dallas convinced some 40,000 fans that they must be given favorable consideration when comes the time to pick the far west opponent in the annual Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena.

Led by the dynamic figure of Russel Bobby Wilson, 147 pounds of gridiron genius, the Southern Methodist eleven completely outplayed Bill Spaulding's Bruins and definitely established themselves in the eyes of local patrons as quite the best football team seen in Southern California this season.

They appeared to possess all the defensive qualities of the lauded Golden Bears of California, and they showed far more class and versatility in offensive play than either California or Stanford

They scored one touchdown in the first quarter and two in the fourth, kicking goals after each, and at no time was their own goal line seriously threatened by the Bruins, who in this game saw their last chance for Rose Bowl recognition erased from the blackboard.

In Wilson, the Mustangs presented one of the most outstanding as well as one of the finest all-around backfield men the Colliseum has seen in several seasons.

The first score was made on a 25-yard pass from Bob Finley to Marion Stewart, acting captain, after which Maurice Orr kicked the goal.

The Mustangs scored again early in the fourth quarter when Finley bucked the ball over center from the three-yard line after Wilson had completed six forward passes in a row.

A moment later, Ranspot intercepted Funk's pass and lateralled to Finley, who ran a third of the length of the field for the third and final touchdown.

HUSKIES To Lose TEN

Ten Northeastern University gridsters have played their last game with the Husky varsity eleven.

These ten become seniors next year under N. U.'s five-year plan, and thus will be ineligible for intercollegiate athletic competition.

Of the team, eight have played together for four years, being members of the original freshman squad of 105 that reported to Coach Al McCoy in September, 1932.

Thirty were retained on this squad. Sixteen lived to be members of the first varsity squad in '34. Eight survived the rivalry to become the first graduating generation at N. U.

The eight men are Captain Joe Chrusz and George Dean, regular tackles; Ike Komich, regular pivot; Hank Abbrussese, reserve center; Pete Yesikenas and Adolph Chaplick, regular guards; Al Hakanson and Larry Templeman, halfbacks, both regulars. The other two seniors are Don Mackiernan, sub-end, and Gordon Morse, reserve tackle.

Whereas the great supply of reserve and freshman material will easily fill the backfield gaps, McCoy will have a much more difficult problem in filling in new men for center, two guards, and two tackles in the line.

Gintoff Better Player Than Ouelette

Mallard Another Bright Prospect at Heights

By Bill Grimes

One of the reasons Harry Downes will be a success at Boston College is that he has an open mind. He never makes the mistake of judging players until he has convinced himself there are no remedies for their weaknesses.

Boston College has been working up to the Holy Cross game all season and will be at the top of its form when the Crusaders invade the Heights. From now until the "Cross" game there will be a merry battle for the honor of starting the only objective game on the B. C. schedule. And you'd be surprised to learn the number of berths open . . .

• • •

As predicted, Felix Gintoff and Henry Ouelette were the stars in the 6 to 6 Boston College-Holy Cross freshman game. Although Ouelette can carry "the mail" with any back that has ever displayed his wares at Alumni Field, Gintoff, in my opinion, is a better football player.

Ouelette is a specialist, limited in a great extent to ball carrying. After the pummeling I saw him take at the Heights I'll say there never was a gamer kid than this youngster from Lawrence. How he can take it. And he was going just as fast and was just as evasive in the fourth period as he was at the start of the game

But Gintoff is a master of all departments. He's a great runner, possessing most deceptive fade, and plenty fast. He's a standout as a passer and has few peers as a punter, both as to distance and placing his kicks. And he's a bear defensively, being a deadly tackler and smart defending against aerial attacks. To round out a perfect football player, he has the poise of a veteran.

Whoever insisted upon 12-minute periods for the freshman classic knew something. B. C. has too many reserves for Holy Cross, and over a 60-minute stretch would have trounced the Crusaders. The class of 1939 has started a new football era at the Heights, and about 30 of its members will be battling for berths on the varsity next year . . .

Much has been written about Felix Gintoff, Bert Horsfall, Jim Jivelikian, Arthur Allen and Dick Cuff, but little has been heard of Herb "Ducky" Mallard, who will crash the varsity next fall or I miss my guess. Mallard is big, strong and fast. Moreover, he loves to play football. Incidentally, he's not a bad golfer . . . It was he who beat Gerry Anderson, state junior champion, 3 and 1, in the first round of the Hearst New England junior championship last fall at Sandy Burr . . .

• • •

Coach Dick Harlow will gather the survivors of the Princeton game today and start his drive for Yale. The Harvard team is coming. It will be ready for Yale . . .

• • •

After the shellacking the Tigers gave Harvard, Earl Blaik, Big Green coach, fully appreciates the assignment his Indians of the North have one week from Saturday. Princeton is one of the most powerful college teams in the country, but if the Tigers fail to carry that old urge into the Dartmouth game, Palmer Stadium may receive a coat of dark green paint.

SAMARA Goes to Mat WITH COLLINS

Ethiopia again steps into Mechanics Building tonight when Osa Samara tackles Bill Collins in a special bout

Not content to wrestle in the African style Samara brings with him his own second with his famous Tom-Tom. With this drum the second religiously beats out his signals. By the sound of the drum Samara knows just how weak his opponent is getting, or how strong he is

Those who witnessed the African's demonstrations of holds last week may not be in accord with his ideas of wrestling, but all admit he brings to the ring the savagery and antics of the warriors of Haile Selassie.

While this probably will be the big feature tonight, the main bout is also something to talk about for Al Vantres, who has wrestled for the last 20 years and lost only six bouts in that time, is determined to lift the light heavyweight title from he head of the German, Mephisto.

34 Killed on GRID

HIGHEST SINCE 1931

Five deaths last week brought the total on the Associated Press list to 34, the highest since 1931. Forty-nine fatalities that year resulted in a revision of the rules.

Deaths this year already exceed by [illegible] the total for the 1934 season. The latest [illegible] was suffered by Hayes [illegible], 16-year-old high school [illegible].

Sandlot and [illegible] schools [illegible] have accounted for the victims in close [illegible].

A composite of [illegible] compiled by the Associated Press and [illegible] H. Eastwood of New York [illegible] sity, who prepares deaths and injuries [illegible] for the National Football Coaches Association, and the rules committee of the N. C. A. A., shows that 13 schoolboys and four sandlotters died last [illegible] totals so far this season a [illegible] 9, respectively.

3 COLLEGIANS

Three fatalities each have been chalked up against college and club gridirons, trailing the 1934 total by one in each instance.

Eleven deaths have been reported from the East, 10 from the Midwest, four each from the South and Far West, three from the Southeast and one each from Canada and Hawaii.

The victims were:

COLLEGE—James Long, University of Tennessee junior College; Jack Hartsock, Ohio Wesleyan University; Walter M. Bark, University of Oregon.

BRIDGTON BEATS Bowdoin '39, 19-12

Brunswick, Maine, Nov. 11—The Bridgton javees coached by Jackie Fisher, former Everett and Dartmouth star, eked out a 19 to 12 victory over Bowdoin freshman, in a game played here today.

Battling on almost even terms for the first three periods the Bridgtonites uncorked a tremendous offense in the fourth quarter and pushed over the winning marker.

Semi-Pro Title

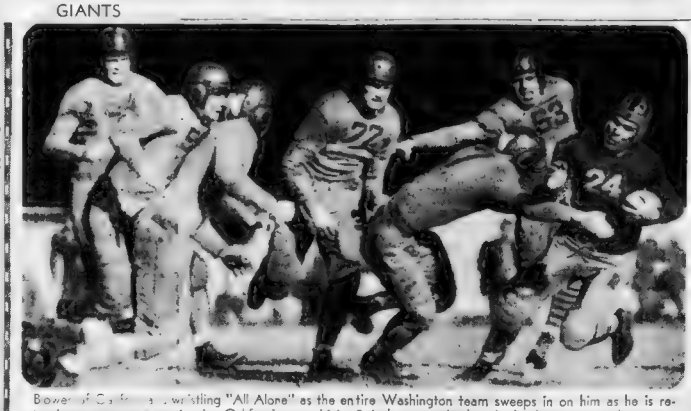
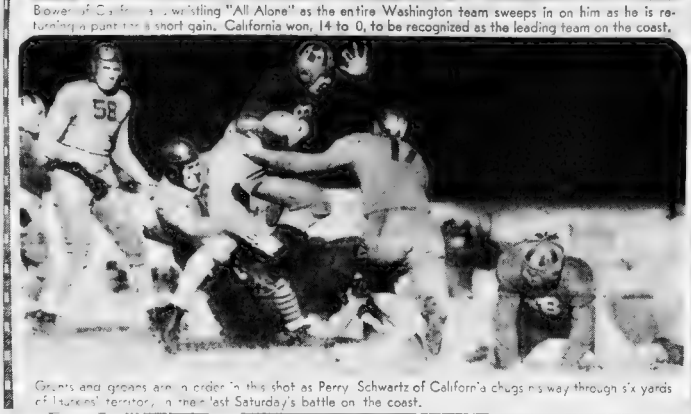
NOTHING CHEAP ABOUT NEAP



Bower of California whistling "All Alone" as the entire Washington team sweeps in on him as he is returning a punt for a short gain. California won, 14 to 0, to be recognized as the leading team on the coast.



Grants and greases and a order in this shot as Perry Schwartz of California chugs his way through six yards of Hurkens' territory, in their last Saturday's battle on the coast.

Injured B. C. Backs Return

The return of Paul Flaherty and Ed Driscoll today, restores the Boston College backs to their full strength for the first time since the Michigan State game and gives Coach Harry Downes renewed confidence as he starts his squad on the "road back" for the last three games.

Flaherty, who quarterbacked the first Eagle backfield in the Spartan, New Hampshire and Providence victories, was out of last Saturday's game with a severe leg bruise, but he will take up his pilot berth against Springfield Saturday.

Driscoll, a senior like Flaherty entered the Michigan State game to score the first Eagle touchdown and play a great game until he was taken out with a badly twisted knee.

Since then he has had a leg infection, but he worked out easily last week and will not be lost for the season as was once feared.

Both Flaherty and Driscoll products of Woburn, are expected to add new punch to the Eagle offence which was rather impotent against Western Maryland.

Jim Cahill, soph wingman, who has been holding down the right end post since the start of the season, is another who was to return for action today. Cahill was one of Saturday's till with a leg bruise.

Wilson Picks Him As Best Bet

By Dave Wilson

Narragansett Park, Nov. 12—Neap, runnerup to Victorious Ann, returns to the racing wars nicely placed in the six furlongs of the featured Brockton Purse here this afternoon.

He is my best bet of the day

FIRST RACE

Cantersine, Liberty Oak, Traitor

CANTERSINE appears beautifully placed in this number. This speedy mare received her tighteners behind Cancel and other clever platers a few days back. LIBERTY OAK is unreliable, but he shapes up as the stoutest sort of a contender on best races.

SECOND RACE

Fancy Flight, Cruising, Rochester

FANCY FLIGHT failed to run her usual fast race last time. That effort may be tossed into the discard she gets in nicely under 107 pounds. CRUISING turned in a dull performance in his debut, but Agawam performances show he is capable of far better things. ROCHESTER, freshened up since Canada, will be coming up razor sharp.

THIRD RACE

Free Spirit, A. O'Connell, Infinata

FREE SPIRIT is dropping down from the $2000 top and bottom class and needs only an even shake in riding luck in order to earn dividends. A. O'CONNELL figures to offer the contention.

FOURTH RACE

Neap, Chatuga, Wee Tune

NEAP suffered from lack of racing room in his most recent endeavor. He ran as if pounds the best. CHATUGA has won her last two starts in a row.

FIFTH RACE

Indian Broom, Barnsley, Eddie's Brother

Just have to give INDIAN BROOM one more chance. The Brookmeade colorbearer was a "red-hot" favorite over this same field only a few days back, but had scant chance to show his true worth after being all but knocked down at the start and then carried to the outside fence on the clubhouse turn. BARNSLEY turned in a bang-up performance behind Grog last time.

SIXTH RACE

Union, Platinum Blonde, Salut D'Amour

UNION turned in a dull performance last time. Previous good form indicates he is capable of handling a field of this sort. PLATINUM BLONDE is coming up off a corking victory over SALUT D'AMOUR.

SEVENTH RACE

Mathias, My Surprise, All Rowes

Digging deep into the brine basin for MATHIAS in this affair. This plater hasn't been showing so well of late, but I've a strong hunch he may belong to Fran Hawkins in this number. MY SURPRISE looks all over the one to fear on the strength of recent good races.

EIGHTH RACE

Chrysmute, Dancing Cloud, Alice Byrd

CHRYSMUTE needs only intelligent handling in order to grace the winner's circle. His last dull performance may be tossed into discard. He was outmatched that day.

SHOTTON Wins Berth

Columbus O., Nov. 12 (INS)—President George Trautman of the Columbus Red Birds today announced Burt Shotton has been appointed manager of the 1936 Columbus Red Birds to succeed Ray Blades who had been at the helm for the past three years.

Blades will manage the Rochester International League club next year, succeeding Shotton who took over the reins of the Rochester club in mid-season after Manager Pat Crawford became seriously ill. Both clubs are class AA subsidiaries of the St. Louis Cardinals.

JACKSON IN To Succeed Bush

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—The nominating committee of the United States Golf Association has named for the presidency John G. Jackson, Columbia football star more than 30 years ago.

Jackson, former general counsel to the association and one of its vice-presidents since 1933, was chosen to succeed Prescott S. Bush of Greenwich, Conn.

Jess W. Sweetser, national amateur champion in 1922 and British amateur champion in 1926, has been nominated to succeed Bush on the executive committee. All other officers are slated for re-election.

Games Wanted

The Arthur E. Paul Club of Jamaica Plain, runners-up in the varsity division of the Boston Park Department Football League, is seeking games away from home for November 17, 24 and 27.

MAINE Harriers REPEAT

SAWYER NIPS CUB MARK

Maine did not bother to bring its New England I. C. 4-A. cross country championship cup down from the thick of the North woods, for the 23d annual N. E. cross country run.

Bill Hunnewell of Maine paced the team, the plucky lad from the North parts running a front race to win in 22 11 01, a few seconds lower than the record set in 1934 by Edwin Veysey, Colby star, who was unable to compete this year.

George Sawyer of Maine won the freshman run, scoring home in 16 45 3-5 to break the record of 16 52 set in 1934 by John Irving of New Hampshire.

Varsity: Won by Maine, 35; second, Rhode Island, 58; third, New Hampshire, 76; fourth, Bowdoin, 97; fifth, Conn. State, 103; sixth, Tufts, 149; seventh, Mass. State, 182; eighth, Northeastern, 185; ninth, M. I. T., 198; tenth, Bates, 227; eleventh, Springfield, 316.

Freshman: Won by Northeastern, 43; second, New Hampshire, 62; third, Rhode Island, 70; fourth, Maine, 90; fifth, Tufts, 107; sixth, Mass. State, 108.

Varsity—Won by Bill Hunnewell (Maine); second, Ray Proctor (Mass. State); third, William Eckhart (Rhode Island State); fourth, David Webster (New Hampshire); fifth, Stephen Starr (Tufts); sixth, Herbert Dever (Colby); seventh, William Linley (Conn. State); eighth, Thomas Sutcliffe (Conn. State); ninth, Robert Porter (Bowdoin); tenth, Alexander Born (Rhode Island State.) Time —22:21.01.

Freshman — Won by George Sawyer (Maine); second, Robert Pritchard (Northeastern); third, Carlton Rinehart (Northeastern); fourth, Norman Cuddy (Rhode Island State); fifth, Machson Stevens (Colby); sixth, Ernest Hargraves (Rhode Island State); seventh, Russell Sanborn (New Hampshire); eighth, Kenneth Wentworth (Maine); Paul Sears (Northeastern); tenth, Emmett Baldic (New Hampshire). Time — 16:54 3-5. (New record, old record, 16.55).

GINTOFF VS. OUELETTE

Start of Classic Four-Year Gridiron Rivalry Seen in B. C.-H. C. Freshman Game

15,000 See Duel

SCHOOLBOYS WHO LIVED UP TO PROMISE

By Will Connell

School grid skyrockets often fizzle in college.

Handicaps of publicity, lack of study, funds or physique stymie many a headlined youngster after school days.

Two great school backs proved exceptions to the above this season, Henry Ouelette of Holy Cross and Felix Gintoff of Boston College.

Prospects of the duel between the pair, quarterbacks of their frosh elevens, lured close to 15,000 persons to Alumni Field at Boston College for the annual game which ended in a six all draw.

The customers were richly rewarded as the pair placed periods to the paragraphs of their yearling grid careers.

Gintoff and Ouelette took the center of the stage from their strong supporting cast and proved that the All-America predictions for both are perfectly sound.

Ouelette is a Mark Devlin protege from Lawrence high, and since Mark is a former Holy Cross star it's not surprising that Henry became a Crusader.

He was said to be headed for Columbia, Navy and Notre Dame at various stages of his school career. Since he was an honor student as well as athlete, he would have had no difficulty, regardless of the college chosen.

At Lawrence he played for three years during most of the stretch when Lawrence won all its games. He was small, weighing below 150 but was smart, and learned to avoid all unnecessary punishment. Thus he rarely was hurt at all though school foes were shooting at him on every play.

A good forward passer, blocker, ball carrier and punt receiver, he made Lawrence's perfect season of 1934 almost a solo proposition. And so to Holy Cross, where his football and baseball talent will keep him in the headlines for the next three years.

Gintoff's unusual first name is Felix. He is of Polish extraction. Because he was playing with Stevens High of Claremont, N. H. he won little attention from Boston newspapers.

Claremont was bowling over its foes with ease a year ago, and at that time Coach Hubie McDonough of Manchester Central told to writer of Gintoff's outstanding ability.

Felix, unlike Ouelette had size in his favor. He now stands 5-11 weighs 175-plus and is growing. He could do anything well in the backfield, was a smart, hard-hitting blocker, ball carrier, kicker, passer and anything else you care to name a gridiron. And was a star in basketball and baseball.

Like Ouelette he was a brainy student and also could take criticism. Coaches who like to tell players where they get off will find Gintoff a pupil who will profit by such advice.

A brilliant future at University Heights is assured Felix Gintoff. The Claremont, N. H., quarterback, a ringer for Cliff Battles of the Redskins, wound up a sensational day's work against the Holy Cross freshmen eleven by tossing a scoring pass, a 25 yard run and an romp which gave the Eagles a 6 to 6 tie.

PROS' BLUFF CALLED BY RUNYON

IGNORE WARNER CHALLENGE

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, By Universal Service)

New York, Nov. 12—It seems that some of the professional football players have been interviewed about our proposition that a good college football team can beat the best of the pros, and the 98 per cent reaction is:

Meaning us.

We submit that is not very heavy testimony and had grammar too. One does not say "Aw, says 'oh.'

We do not recall that they said "aw, he's crazy."

We believe they couched the same thought in somewhat more fabulous terms.

However, we are not going to thrown off the track of our argument by expressions from aged players like Mr Grange and Mr Friedman.

They have been away from college game so long that they are not sure, that they know just what extent the college game has advanced.

PASSE

We dislike bringing the matter up, but as proof of the vast distance that college football has come from Mr. Friedman we must cite the score of the battle they waged against the Friedman-coached team, the College of the City of New York.

Both Mr. Grange and Mr. Friedman are among the all time great players of college football, though they played in a big-game era of college football.

They have since played professional football. Sometimes they have played it even better than they played college football, because they found the slower and less imaginative pro game a cinch after college football.

As a young fellow, we remember seeing Mr. Grange and Mr. Friedman. Yes, they were both excellent players. We believe that had they come on into the era of college football, they would have both made good. In fact, they might have made the first team.

You can see we have a very high opinion of the ability of Mr Grange and Mr. Friedman. They were all right, those boys.

"The only answer the professionals have made so far to 'Pop' Warner's celebrated challenge for a game between the college All-Americas of 1935, as selected by the All-America group, and an all-star professional team, has been a general denial.

We suggest that the professionals do not care for this game. They are afraid a beaten team of picked stars by an All-America college team would be a showing up of the pro game.

CARR SILENT

We saw Mr. Joe Carr, the president of the National League of Professional Clubs, in Columbus Ohio his home town, during the Notre Dame-Ohio State game, and spoke to him of "Pop" Warner's challenge.

But Mr. Carr was not a talkative mood. He merely said Ohio State was the best college team he had ever seen—which it was at the time Mr. Carr remarked.

Well, at this writing, we are one up on the pros anyway. They can no longer go around gabbing about the superiority of their professional football. That is a case of put up, or shut up.

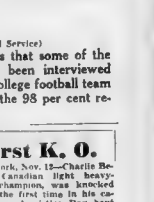
'Windmill' Will Test Count



Maxie Goldberg

Count George Zarynoff will be on the spot at the Boston Arena tomorrow night when he meets Maxie Windmill Goldberg, the fastest punishing wrestling in the feature of Alex Marlean's show.

The Count who started as a schoolboy back in 1916 with Jack Curley, has everything but a chin to lose and little to win against the Jewish giant, new sensation of the mat world, who has stolen the spotlight at the Arena.

The acrobatic Russian nobleman is plainly worried about Goldberg because, for the first time in his career, Zarynoff will be facing an opponent who can more than match him in speed and nimbleness.

There are two of three falls bout is expected to be the nearest thing to a hurricane seen in this section of the country.

MacLean today completed his program, clinching three preliminaries—Henry Piers vs. Abe Kaplan, a newcomer; Heinie Olson vs. Chief Little Moose and Hermi Olson vs. Jack Rose. The Olson brothers are the colorful Swedes from Minnesota.

The semi-final will be Tommy Ras vs. Red O'Dell, with Dick Haines vs. Al Peckham, and Leo Hyatt, former Gold Secret, vs. Don Petroff, another newcomer, listed as special bouts.

Canadian Ice Teams Intent On Keeping Stanley Cup

By Murray Goodman
Universal Service Sports Editor

New York, Nov. 12—Reports from the Dominion hockey fronts indicate a mass Canadian attack for the National Hockey League championship this year.

The Canadian representatives in the major league of hockey—Montreal a big Red Maroons, Toronto's Maple Leafs and Les Canadiens—are rumored to have vastly improved sextets, and an improved team was up in those cold regions, if past performances are used as a basis of comparison, must be little short of a "world brate."

For ten successive years, since the inauguration of big-league stick-wielding in 1917, those Canadians ruled the ice-rinks.

Thereafter, until Toronto's Maple Leafs came through in 1932, the cup has remained in American hands. But a repetition of Canada's past triumphs looms.

Montreal's big Red team won last year and, according to "he en thusiasm being let off, there is no end to the Canadian reign in the books for this year.

"We are as strong as or stronger than last year in every position, but need the games to take the edge off our training routine."

The only absentees are Alex Connell and Herbie Cain. Cain is a holdout, while the aging Connell has been replaced at the pegs by the able Lil Beveridge of the defunct St. Louis Eagles.

On the defense the 35 goals have strongholds in Alex Shields and Lionel Conacher or Cy Wentworth and Stew Kane.

The addition of Joe Lamb a star with the St. Louis Eagles will add more zip to the already dazzling Maroon offensive.

The Leafs made their seasonal debut in Toronto last Saturday and though held to a 5-5 tie by the New York Americans displayed enough talent and power to warrant the prediction that they should finish either first or second in the International Division.

Jackson is still on the outs with the club and did not start against the Amerks.

Manager Dick Irvin has made only minor changes in the lineup that reached the final playoffs last year. Aside from the sale of Harold Cotton to the Amerks and the elevation of two minor leaguers, the team is unchanged.

They have a new owner in President Ernie Savard and a new manager in Sylvio Mantha.

"The team is considerably better than last season, and we have several good amateur prospects."

'MEMBER DAN LONG?

ALL-AROUND CHAMP OF B. A. A.

By Walter Kiley

The Back Bay club has closed its doors for good. Its goods and chattels have been auctioned off under the blows of an impressive hammer.

His was a "golden age" in Unicorn history. Dan boasts medals and trophies and souvenirs of his all-around athletic supremacy, enough of them to fill the treasure room of a big-time college.

Long was an "iron man" who seven years running won all-around B. A. A. titles. He held three club records and figured prominently in national track and field championships from coast to coast.

There were many other great westerns of the Unicorn of his time and of later generations, Ellery Clark, Sr., Frank Rowe, Tom Burke, Tom Keane, Jimmy Fowers, later Dave Caldwell, Oscar Redlund and Freddie Burns, and still later Jake Driscoll, Harry Barwise and Walter Whalen, the Lermonds, Leo and George, and a host of others of United States and Olympic fame.

But few of them could compare with the 180-pound super-man who thought nothing of dashing from one event to another until finally he had competed in eight or nine in a single afternoon.

Long made his first appearance as an athlete in the city of Boston games on July 4, 1887.

The next season he started on the road to B. A. A. glory.

Seconds in the 100-yard dash, 120-yard hurdles and mile; first in the 16-pound shot, high jump, 16-pound hammer, 56-pound weight and running broad jump; third in the pole vault.

It took a he-man to survive such punishing competition, and to go on year after year with successive improvement.

There are the fellows then. Dan Long and big henchmen, who shed a salty tear as the B. A. A. coasted into oblivion.

They are the oldtimers who exist in the present while living in memories of the past, a glorious past when the Boston Athletic Association was a national institution and athletes deemed it a great honor to carry its golden unicorn to the arenas of the country.

Tech Swim Team Title Bound

"We are headed for a championship year," proudly announced John Jarosh this morning, after serving his first week as Tech swimming coach.

"With Cleon Dodge in the back stroke, Barney Vonnegut in the breast stroke, Ward Rafferty in the free style and Captain James Patterson for the relays, I can expect a really fine team."

With 40 more varsity men to choose from among which are a number of experienced swimmers, Jarosh sees a championship team in the making, and he hopes to do just that in his first year as coach. He hopes to have a well balanced team when it opens against Bowdoin on Dec. 14 at the University Club.

Title Bout

Death in the Alps!

Four Boys and a Broken Rope on a Dizzy Mountain Peak

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Bernhart D. Loecker lives now at 653 E. 164th street, New York City, but was born in the foothills of the Austrian Alps and Bernhart was crawling up mountains on all fours before he could stand on his two feet. He yodels a mean story today about the most thrilling mountain climb of his climbing youth—a climb that left his boyhood chum a shapeless mass at the bottom of a mountain pass!

Bernhart was only 13 when it happened. The other boys didn't want to take him along. But they did. They set out to climb the "Nordland"—a towering peak some nine thousand feet high. But listen to Bernhart tell it.

"It was a beautiful Sunday morning. The sun had just risen and shone red in the pale sky. The road was good to the "Schutzhuette"—a cabin half-way up for the convenience of Alpine climbers. There we left most of our equipment and took only ropes, alpen stocks and sandwiches.

"Beyond the timber-line the going got much harder. We stuck little yellow mountain flowers in our hats for good luck and tied ourselves together with a length of rope between each boy. I was second to the last because I was the youngest. Hans—my chum—was last and more experienced than I.

"The sharp nails in our heavy boots crunched pleasantly on the sand and stones. Soon we were traveling on all fours straight into the low hanging clouds and fog. Once above the fog a beautiful sight spread beneath us. The valleys were covered in a mantle of filmy white but here and there majestic peaks jutted—through the mist—their snow clad summits glistening like jewels in the bright sunlight.

"Luck was with us. We reached the top. But tragedy was waiting for us on the trip down. Strange to say, it is easier to climb UP a mountain than down. One is apt to get careless on the return trip.

"After resting and draining our canteens we started down. On a perfectly level stretch Fritz—who was leading—slipped and would have taken a death dive of five hundred feet or so if it were not for a ledge which stopped his fall. We were not expecting anything, and his weight almost dragged us all off our feet and over the precipice. This sobered us and we became more careful. Bad luck comes in threes. A few minutes another slip nearly proved disastrous and we were all became tense and alert for the third.

"Going down the order of march was reversed. Hans led, I was second and Sepp and Fritz followed. Hans would descend until the slack in his rope stopped him. I would follow and the others would repeat. This system left three steady on their feet, ready to hold the one who might fall. In this order we crawled down.

"At the fog line we reached a dangerous ledge. Hans went over and sung out for me to follow. I was just stepping over carefully when Hans screamed and as he did I was jerked off my feet and over the ledge and the next thing I knew I was hanging over a precipice in mid air!

"Terrified I looked up and down. Above me Fritz and Sepp were braced against the cliff and holding on for dear life. Below me Hans swung back and forth in a desperate effort to regain his footing. At each move the rope that held him scraped against a sharp rock and as I looked a strand snapped and parted.

"Above me the same thing was happening to my rope. But we had to do something. Lying there still might have kept the rope from cutting but this would not save us. The others would soon become tired and nobody was within miles of us to help.

"I was looking up at the other boys straining to pull us both up, when suddenly I felt myself shoot upward. A scream came from below. The boys pulling became so frightened that they almost let me drop back again. We all knew what had happened. Hans' rope had parted and he had gone hurtling down into space.

"Somehow or other they pulled me up safely to the ledge. We lay down and looked cautiously over. There far below on the sharp rocks was a little dot—all that was left of poor Hans!

"Rescue parties found us—too terrified to climb down—and brought us to the cabin. Hans was buried where they found him—two days later. We all attended his funeral with ropes slung over our shoulders in the Alpine fashion. And there is a post today, with a piece of rope and a sign on it, to tell where Hans fell."

And, boys and girls, Bernhart's story and his mountain climbing ends at that little post in an Alpine valley.

HOLLAND

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Producer Ridle struggling with a spectacle called "Jumbo" sort of indoor circus with a musical score, a story by Hecht and MacArthur, 12 elephants, Paul Whiteman and his band and Jimmie Durante.

Jumbo has been rehearsing for 15 weeks this opening at the New York Hippodrome has been postponed several times, and the postponements have not been trifling deferments of a week's duration.

Everything about "Jumbo" seems its producer, who weighs 191 pounds, is on a big scale. When Mr. Rose has produced a show, it has been for period of not less than a week.

* * *

Beginning in Miss Brice and her appearance in Mr. Rose this department finds an inside tip in the news that Fannie is ready to appear in Billie Burke's new production which the Messrs. Shubert will bring to the Shubert theater Christmas week.

This news item indicates that Miss Brice is convinced not merely that "Jumbo" will open eventually, but that it will actually give a public performance before December 1.

"Jumbo" will have cost $3.00,000 when it has its premiere scheduled now for next Saturday night. Knowing Miss Brice's love for to her friends and helpmate it seems a positive that she could not undertake a new show with the worry of her hubby's hitches on their mutual mind. A mutual and constructive effort Fannie is helping considerably. I feel sure, in what understanding Mr. Rose is doing right now.

The new "Follies," by the way, takes early form as one of the musical hits of early 1936. Ken Murray has been added to a cast in the third Miss Brice, Josephine Baker, the colored girl who has been abroad for years, is making fame and fortune.

* * *

Several observations of Judith Allen—two of her stage work and one of her radio-ing—make this column convinced that with half a break the Belmont girl could acquire the proportions of a popular star. There are few in Hollywood who are quite so lovely to look at offstage, or offscreen.

And whatever the brethren of the sports-writing world make of Jack Doyle's potentialities as a pugilist, he is one of the most gracious, pleasant and sincere young men that this corner has met around the footlights. And are they in love!

* * *

Enthusiasm about a marked increase in business at her Copley Theater since her self-authored play, "Katydid — So What?" opened a week ago, Mary Young reminds this corner that many successful plays have been written by actors. She names Edgar Selwyn, David Belasco, Noel Coward, Augustus Thomas, George M. Cohan, and could have included Shakespeare.

Actor—well, Mary can have her playwrights. For 1935-36, I'll string along with Sherwood, Anderson, Hecht and MacArthur, Howard, Kaufman, Rykind, Sialings, Raphaelson, Runyon and a half-dozen others easy to name. Renegade newspapermen, all of them.

White Triumph

"Scandals" Crowded With Talent

By JOYCE DANA

When George White brings on the girls, it's a show. In the twelfth edition of his "Scandals," which opened at the Opera House last night, there's enough material for a broadside of revues, and more beauty than has been glorified in a couple of decades.

The repertoire scene with a deft bit of cutting by someone, or some will drag out the excess baggage by the time the week is over White's left and what left with Mr. Whites ex[illegible] he added a the new ones.

The cream [illegible] stage [illegible] again [illegible] and [illegible] reads showing Theresa Ann Lahr, funnier [illegible] he never been which is enough to [illegible] the most rock-ribbed of [illegible] Theresa Grace Barrie [illegible] trick of the week [illegible] help us, with a sturdy and sassy voice that filled the big Opera House, some of those Ray Henderson tunes that will resound on the radio and start the boys in the backroom harmonizing.

Last night's performance [illegible] topped more than [illegible] Sun Ted and Ray, a trio of dance steppers who ought to make Fred Astaire and Robinson feel positively seedier, burlesqued Seamon and his two-man army in the most intricate and incredible taps, with slides, skips, jumps and turns interpolated, that were enough to keep anybody dizzy.

* * *

Shea and Raymond appearing innocently enough from under the shade of a big parasol, drowned out the impression of the evening taking bows for the maddest, travesty of the dance as the Astaire and Rainbow Room have known it, yet devised.

The Stanley Twins turned in a shadow dance that would have had Robert Louis Stevenson guessing, and the nice looking Jack Oxford sang "I'm the Fellow Who Loves You," probably his time number one, with the same pert Gracie Barrie, to show this department's vote on the whole George White ticket.

It's our guess that Sheila Barrett in sketches, and Betty Jane Cooper in toe-tickling dances, will have more to do before Saturday rolls around. And since Cliff Edwards seems to have achieved a minor miracle in restoring his voice to where it belongs, he wouldn't be a bad idea if that brief flash of his ukulele business got a bigger and better spot.

As for the chorus—Ah Mr White! They couldn't be prettier. The Le Maire costumes couldn't be better. You should just see what scarlet velvet gloves and revealing costumes done in chartreuse chiffon can do to simple calisthenics.

A bit of a deficiency in all this elaborate entertainment is, from the front of the house where all bemused critics sit, that even Mr. Lahr's funniest [illegible] [illegible] could watch his timing a bit sharper could [illegible] and funnier. The advice [illegible] since a terrific [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

U. S. OPERATION

Of Rails SEEN AS Possible

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Tucked away in an inconspicuous spot in the holiday news dispatches was an item telling how Boston's Joseph B. Eastman, now federal co-ordinator of transportation, saw government rail ownership as possible.

Speaking at the annual conference of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks in St. Louis, Mr. Eastman said the prospect was in no way shocking to him. While the time, he admitted, was not yet, despite the "sorry mess" railroads are in, federal operation must be seriously viewed as a last recourse.

* * *

This sorry mess, that leads to consideration of the last recourse, is necessary because of the possibility railroads may lose their attractiveness for private capital. The inference, of course, is that railroad management has been a sorry affair. Well, perhaps it is not wholly blameless. But is government any better? After the wartime operation of the roads there was quite a load of debt shouldered by private management and private capital. And of late there are the raw deal sponsored pension scheme and the Guffey Coal Bill to plague management with increased expenses.

* * *

Notebook: No, rail management is not entirely to blame . . . And if Mr. Eastman is going to insist, in the event of government operation, that rails be made to pay their own way, why not tell the secret now . . . Surely it does not rest entirely on the magic touch of government management and low interest financing . . . Finally, remember that rails are competing with other transportation agencies that nowhere near approach them for liberality in wages and payment of taxes of all kinds.

* * *

It is difficult to turn away from the rails today. Their general health is a matter of concern for everyone and their importance marketwise hard to overestimate. No matter how lackadaisical the move up from March through to October was, the fact remains the rails confirmed step by step the far wider upswing of industrials. This they did not do recently as the other group surged into new high ground. We will allow today and tomorrow for the wanted to happen.

* * *

Shorts: Watch rail bonds . . . Last three sessions have not been up to snuff . . . Too many traders think the stock tape is all that counts . . . Far from it . . . The bond tape often tells an advance story . . . Carrier Corporation, curb listed, comes to us from a good source . . . If rails get going in here, as they promise to, early in the session, as we finish this bit, the groups already noted are the favored ones . . . Steels, utilities, rail equipments and rails.

BOEING Reports Loss

Harbison-Walker

The dividend of 25 cents declared November 4 on the common stock of Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. is payable December 2 instead of December 6 as previously stated.

Bar Gold

London, Nov. 12 (AP)—Bar gold declined ½ penny to 141s. 4d. (U. S. equivalent $34.80.)

MARKET Heavy AT CLOSE

ACTIVITY DWINDLES

New York, Nov. 12 — The stock market developed a heavy tone in most departments today after a brief upward flourish in the first half hour.

Some of the communications issues bucked the trend for sizable advances and the rails were resistant. A number of the recent leaders backed up fractions to more than 2 points under profit taking. The activity dwindled on the decline.

Radio preferred B got up 5 points, but later shaded this gain. Western Union was nearly 2 higher. American Telephone, Great Northern, Radio common, General Electric, North American Aviation and United Stores were slightly improved.

Among the losers were General Motors, Chrysler, Case, Electric Auto-Lite, Johns-Manville, du Pont, Allied Chemical, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Consolidated Gas, Schenley, National Distillers and American Commercial Alcohol.

Current Items

The strength of radio was coincident with expectations that the sale of the company's holdings of Electric & Musical Industries shares to the British concern, now being negotiated, together with funds recently obtained from the disposal of RKO stock, would enable the radio organization to call its preferred issue.

The softness of some of the alcohols was attributed partly to fears that the new trade agreement with Canada will involve a reduction of tariffs on liquors from that country with a consequent increase in competition with United States Distilleries.

A recovery indicator was seen in the September statement of American Telephone disclosing net of $1,459,009 for the month against $911,490 in the same month last year.

The figure covered operating income only, excluding dividends, interest and other revenues received and non-operating charges such as dividends and rents paid.

A drop in department store sales in October under the September total was disclosed by the Federal Reserve Board. The month's business, however, was six per cent ahead of October, 1934, while sales for 10 months were four per cent above those of the same period last year.

ARCHER-DANIELS Common "Extra"

Archer-Daniels-Midland Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents and a special dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, both payable December 2 to stock of record November 21. Similar special dividends were paid in previous quarters.

Company reports for quarter ended September 30, 1935, net profit of $397,060, equal, after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent preferred, to 62 cents a share on the 549,546 shares of common, against $529,528, or 86 cents a share on the common, in September quarter of previous year. Company's fiscal year ends June 30.

Curb Seat at $33,000

Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Curb Exchange seat at $33,000, up $3000 from previous transaction and a new high for the year.

Outlet OF PUBLIC'S Money

By B. C. Forbes

Weird are the ways Washington is spending—mis-spending—tax money you and I have to sweat to furnish.

One of the countless alphabetical spenders now enjoying a prodigal picnic at the expense of taxpayers has decreed that $300,000 should be supplied to complete a cement mill project in southwestern Kansas, a project which was so ill-conceived and so inadequately financed that it died aborning.

Why the RFC—that one stands for Reconstruction Finance Corporation—should select this particular outlet for $300,000 of the public's money passes the comprehension of non-politicians because there are already 26 cement plants able and anxious to supply that territory.

How able they are to furnish all needed cement may be gathered from the fact that the existing mills have an annual estimated capacity of well over 38,000,000 barrels, whereas during the last three years their shipments have averaged less than one-third of capacity—indeed, only 29 per cent.

When the RFC recently proclaimed its readiness to make industrial loans, it explained that such loans would be "for the purpose of maintaining and increasing the employment of labor."

Now the additional plant may be clear to the theorists now dissipating money in Washington, but it certainly isn't clear to ordinary mortals accustomed to having to earn the money they spend.

* * *

There isn't even the shallow excuse that this cement mill will serve as a "yardstick," because the purpose is to furnish the funds to those interested in the venture, to those who have made a fizzle of it.

There was a time when taxpayers were assured that their money was used solely for the purposes of government. The New Dealers, however—after being elected, not before—conceived an entirely new idea of how taxpayers' money should be thrown around. This entirely unneeded cement mill is one specific example.

Do YOU want to be compelled to pay taxes to enable some heretofore wholly unsuccessful promoters to make unnecessary cement? I don't.

Surely, government has become costly enough without reaching to the far corners of the continent and ladling out your money and mine for purposes not even remotely identified with the administration of government.

* * *

"IF SOCIAL CREDIT WORKS, NOBODY ELSE WILL."

If the nation's bankers learn only one thing at this week's annual convention of the American Bankers' Association, the money spent will prove worthwhile, namely, that bankers owe responsibility to others than their stockholders; yes, to others than even their depositors. What they, in common with industrial executives and all others occupying high places, need to grasp, is that they have a broader responsibility, a social responsibility, a national responsibility, that they must exercise every legitimate effort to keep our economic system working smoothly.

"I'm out for myself, and devil take the hindmost," may be all right for thugs, but emphatically is NOT a principle worthy of thoughtful, responsible, influential citizens.

CURB MARKET PRICES IRREGULAR

Profit Taking Seen

New York, Nov. 12—Curb stocks were irregular today as profit taking affected utilities and individual specialty stocks.

Hiram Walker climbed as much as 1¾ points, Distillers Corp. Seagrams 1¼ points and Kreuger Brewing ½ point. Late, profit taking cut gains somewhat but the group still showed a good net.

Hazeltine climbed more than a point to 12⅜ on further buying resulting from its increased dividend. Wayne Pump, United States Foil B were strong. Parker Rustproof, American Cyanamid B and Doehler Die Casting were soft spots.

Oils gained fractionally.

Mining shares were also fractionally higher.

Utilities were weak. Empire Gas 5s pfd. broke 2 points to 33. Electric Bond & Share recovered ¼ point after dipping ⅝. Northern State Power turned easier after a steady start.

plant would be unable to care for the eager thousands who wished to pour their money into the mutuel machines.

There were so many people in the clubhouse and grandstand on the holiday that some of them did not attempt to leave their seats to the end of way through the milling crowds to the mutuel windows.

Other thousands stood in the rear of the grandstand, and were satisfied with an occasional glimpse of the horses as they paraded around the paddock.

Weather conditions were ideal for the great crowd. It was a gay, happy holiday gathering, and even the losers refused to permit their own misfortunes to upset their holiday.

More racing today, and then on through next Tuesday when Narragansett Park closes and the curtain falls on New England racing until next year.

The sport of kings has furnished its share of heartbreaks, also its thrills and glorious glamour.

The terrific mutuel handle at the various New England tracks this season has made everybody realize there is still plenty of money around. It has taken racing to get some of it back into circulation.

NEXT YEAR

This thought is a good one, for as surely as person has lost his all betting on the races, but the sport has caused thousands with money to invest thinking about the depression long enough to back a horse again. And as they have cheered for their choice in the stretch run their nerves have at least benefited.

Even a blase business man forgets his personal worries at a race track.

There will be some agitation against racing during the coming winter, but the crowds at the various tracks prove the sport is popular with the public.

Next year when the bugle sounds for the first race every those persons who have not fared well at the tracks this season will be there near the rail trying to root a winner home.

JOE LOUIS Goes 4 Rounds

Montreal, Que., Nov. 12 (INS)—The exhibition tour of Joe Louis, Detroit contender for the heavyweight crown, which will take him to many parts of the United States and Europe, today was definitely under way after the "Bronx Bomber" had boxed four one-round bouts here.

A crowd of about 4000 saw Louis exchange blows with Paul Cavalier, San Francisco; Young Kroehell, Bloomfield, N.J.; Mickey MacAvoy, New York, and Andy Walinee, Newark, N. J.

MILDRED BAILEY GUEST ON AIR WITH BERNIE

By N. F. T.

Not many voices soothe the ears of a loudspeaker patron following far and wide, than does that of the "Rockin' Chair Lady" named Mildred Bailey.

It is good then, that Ben Bernie makes known the appearance of Mildred with him (WEEI) on the air between 9 and 9:30 tonight.

Mildred has been absent from the radio realm a good while. Perhaps two or three months, during which she has been busy filling personal engagements behind footlights across the country. But as every broadcasting figure realizes, it isn't wise to forsake the magic "mike" for too long. Thus the smooth-singing stout girl, a real match for Kate Smith any time, on anybody's radio station, in this listening post entitled, will soon be landing sponsorship for another series. If no backers are available, the network program planners should put her on anyway.

SECRET AGENT STARS

Again there will be two talented Secret Agent X-9 artists holding forth for "Uncle Newt" during his Boston Evening American quarter hour (WAAB) this evening at 6:45 p. m. Ruth Hanson, the Everett piano accompanist, has been coaching little Billy Schertel, the 12-year-old songster from South Boston, and 15-year-old Ruth Burke, of Everett. As a result, they will be ready to occupy the guest artist spotlight. Joe Lally, the theme-song-singing lad on the program, is becoming quite a booster for the vocal talent young Billy Schertel displays.

* * *

With Lawrence Tibbett singing and acting the leading role, the world premiere of a miniature grand opera based on Goethe's dramatic poem, "The Eri King," is due to be heard (WNAC) tonight from 8:30 to 9 p. m.

Mabel Downs, soprano; Elizabeth Andres, contralto; Santo di Primio, tenor; and Lawrence Dunne, alto, will constitute the cast to appear with the famous vocalist.

BOB'S BAZOOKA

Stopping in behind the Metropolitan Theater scenes, to say "Howdy" to Bob Burns, the "Arkansas Traveler" and inventor of radioland's comedy find of the year, included a first hand view of his home-made "Bazooka" contraption.

Bob is getting a great hand and says he must jump back to New York for another program date with Paul Whiteman during the "Music Hall" hour (WEEI) on Thursday night.

His strange looking "Bazooka" is a self-made musical gadget, consisting of just what he has told the air audience, a long piece of ordinary plumber's pipe, to which is attached a tin five-and-ten-cent funnel.

There have been theater and radio men who were keen to abandon "the thing" in favor of more droll comedy talk. But "not on your life" Bob answered, emilingly protesting Bob, explaining how it has been part of his professional career since boyhood, when he started entertaining in the hayloft of his uncle's barn. That was 25 years ago or more, back in Van Buren, Arkansas.

Weather Report

FORECAST TILL 2 P. M. WEDNESDAY

For Boston and Vicinity—Light rain and fog tonight and probably early Wednesday; cooler tonight, considerably cooler Wednesday; moderate to fresh east to northeast winds and north winds.

Massachusetts—Rain tonight and probably Wednesday morning; colder tonight and Wednesday.

New Hampshire and Vermont—Rain, snow and rain or snow in south portion tonight and probably Wednesday morning; colder tonight and Wednesday morning; colder tonight and Wednesday morning; colder tonight in extreme south portion Wednesday.

Rhode Island and Connecticut—Rain tonight and probably Wednesday morning; colder tonight; much colder Wednesday.

Atlantic Coast, Eastport to Sandy Hook —Fresh to strong east backing to northeast or north winds over north portion, and fresh shifting becoming northerly over south portion, and overcast weather with rain tonight and Wednesday.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

Cold polar air from the northern interior rests over southeastern Canada, Cochrane, 30.52 inches, and Kelowna, —16 degrees. Portions of this mass extend southward over the St. Lawrence and the middle and upper Lake region, where temperatures are 6 to 22 degrees below. Southward and from here over the Middle and lower Mississippi Valley to Texas, temperatures are 6 to 22 degrees lower in the old modified polar air over these regions. In the polar air mass off the northeast coast the highest reading is Sable Island, 30.42 inches. The central New England southwestward to the Gulf of Mexico figures as the battle ground of pressure. The over running of air currents in this disturbance is producing rain and fog and cloudy weather over most all these regions. There is also a fall of the mercury in temperature over the middle Appalachian Highlands.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. Suffolk, ss. To the heirs-at-law of GERALD CANNON, MARGUERITE CANNON, VOLUNTEER CO-OPERATIVE BANK and to all other persons interested. A petition has been presented to said Court by THOMAS J. CANNON of Boston, in said county, praying that the land held as tenant in common one undivided third part in each of certain lands lying in said County and briefly described as follows: A certain parcel of land in the City of Boston known as Lot 54 on a Plan entitled "Plan of Land in Dorchester, Mass." belonging to Adam J. Furbush," drawn by G. H. Sherman, Surveyor, dated April 9, 1914, recorded with Suffolk Deeds, Book 3939, Page 30, for the same Suffolk Deeds Book 4202, Page 573. Said premises are now numbered 144-146 Bennett Street, Boston, Mass., and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid, according to law and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and he ordered to make sale and convey one of said lots, or any part thereof, which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, and to report his doings in the premises. If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Boston before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the fifth day of December, 1935, the return day of this citation. WITNESS, WILLIAM M. PREST, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this thirty-first day of October in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirty-five.

Not a 'Dummy'

Not only do they lack political wisdom, but something far more necessary—A KNOWLEDGE OF AMERICA AND AMERICANS.

The United States is an organism, the fundamental and dominant trait of which is INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY.

This instinct cannot be torn up by the roots in a series of bureaucratic ukases and "be it enacted" orders without KILLING THE ORGANISM or causing the organism to violently revolt.

Governor Alf. Landon, of Kansas, pointed this out in his bullet-like style of speaking when he said recently:

"THE COUNTRY IS BEGINNING TO LEARN THAT GOVERNMENT CANNOT CHANGE ITS STYLE AS EASILY AND WITH AS LITTLE ILL EFFECT AS MEN AND WOMEN."

Liberty, industrial and individual, is NOT a necktie that can be tied in a bow-knot or a flowing four-in-hand or cast off altogether by rulers who want to see how it looks in the mirror of their own self-complacency.

Liberty is the BREATH of the organism. The country will choke to death without it.

America IS WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, MADISON, FRANKLIN, JACKSON and LINCOLN.

The experimenters in Washington will find that these living, breathing BEINGS in the blood and bone of America cannot be cast out in a night and Marx, Engels and Stalin substituted.

Plans and Planners

H. Gordon Selfridge, the London merchant, discussed recovery in England and in America in a luncheon address last week before the Association of Buying Offices and the Retail Dry Goods Association of New York.

With England far along the road, while America painfully lags, Mr. Selfridge attributed seventy per cent of England's progress to "England's successful home-building program, PRIVATELY FINANCED."

"From my observation," he said, "THE ONLY THING missing over here is the ability to evolve a practical program."

So that is what a distinguished and unbiased observer notes, after three years of "planning" at Washington and the expenditure of thousands of millions of dollars of PUBLIC money.

Mr. Selfridge thinks that, as regards building construction, the plan submitted by Professor Raymond Moley now "may be the answer, if only it will be accepted quickly."

As to both ideas—as a distinguished Englishman used to say—"Let us wait and see!"

Taxes Election Issue

High taxes are there, as elsewhere, a principal topic of discussion.

With Taunton already holding tax titles to about seven hundred homes, Councillor Arthur E. Poole, manufacturing silversmith, says THREE THOUSAND MORE FACE CITY SEIZURE.

Mayoralty Candidate Poole is not alone in calling for tax relief—the other candidates are also for it.

And relief must come for Taunton and other cities, preferably beginning with elimination of governmental extravagance and waste.

This Is Education Week

Announced by proclamation of Governor Curley, this is American Education Week.

Beginning today, parents are invited for the rest of the week to visit the schools.

The aim of the educators is to have parents familiarize themselves with school work.

The parents may be able to suggest some improvements, but the best results should be reached by securing closer co-operation with hard-working teachers.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 12—Ernest Hemingway became the white-haired boy of the cafes and night clubs on his recent metropolitan visit. Broadway usually lavishes its lionizing on a radio, movie or stage star. But, with the exception of Michael Arlen, seldom an author.

Press agents who could entice Hemingway in front row table and then have his presences noised about were certain of a tilt in receipts for the evening. That's a branch of the par art these days—landing a celebrity and tipping it off to the fawners.

Hemingway was symbolic of the great out-doors to the pallid patrons of the stuffy night snoopies. The stalker of lions, the deep sea battler with the barracuda and frequenter of the Spanish bull rings. What is more, he gave the impression of being unconscious of his celebrity.

He engaged in florid arguments at the bars with casual toss-pots, seemed to enjoy the floor shows and walked out sober at dawn. Somewhat a phenomenon in the usual blurr. He gave cafe society a chance to boast: "I said to Hemingway last night at ——."

I like to watch a cafe torch singer bob into the room with animation a short while before she puts over her act and then watch her drift back to her special table in melancholy haze after her lament is finished.

When she dances — a waiting boy friend is always about—she moves in trance-like shuffles, lost in a morass of unrequited hopes. It's art casting a spell, or grand acting. One guess to each customer.

Mrs. Grace Coolidge came to town recently to discuss a magazine assignment and Arthur McKeogh attempted to aid in making her visit as pleasant as possible.

He selected a sedate Guild show for the evening and after the play escorted the former president's widow to the highhandshaks Rainbow Room. Mrs. Coolidge thought she would like a chocolate sundae. The waiter was doubtful, but scurried away and returned to announce it could not be secured.

So McKeogh archly inquired if they had vanilla ice cream. They had. Had they chocolate sauce? They had. So both were brought and Mrs. Coolidge had a bootleg chocolate sundae.

The movies have developed a sudden, furious band of hissers. Especially news reels. The disapproval is not always a question of political faith.

Sometimes it becomes religious and at times sharply personal, as when the ruin of the sideswiped automobile was recently shown with a close-up of the Roosevelt boys. Hissing and jeers were shockingly pronounced.

When Booth Tarkington was flossing up his coastal summer home at Kennebunkport, Maine, he decided to decorate the large combination work and living room in appropriate marine style. It was hung with lanterns of long-ago galleons, bits of anchor chain and myriad other heavy encumbrances suggesting a ship.

He was at the time entering a long darkness that for awhile physicians thought would become an eternal night. But after a year or so partial vision was restored.

And as objects began to take shape, he ripped out the maritime decorations and substituted vivid paintings, canvas splashes of sun rises and sunsets, wild flowers and vivid tapestries of unimaginable hues.

Oddly enough, writers, whose eyes are put to a terrific strain, seldom lose their sight. The only one of the modern crop I know about is Dr. Alex Mumbe, who wrote "The Story of San Michele."

But he was going blind when he began to write. Deafness is a more common affliction among literary folk and its ravages include Rupert Hughes, Carolyn Wells, Ellen Glasgow, Royal S. Brown and William McFee.

Listen, World!

YOU NEVER CAN TELL

She was, they say, a great, bitter flame of a woman. What she had been before she descended upon that rowdy mining camp in the California Sierra, no one knew. Nor did she ever tell.

Suddenly there she was—stepping down out of the old stage coach into the plaza—her fringed flounces trailing in the sun-seared dust, her Spanish shawl blooming like some fierce jungle flower against the bare, bright hills, the brilliant, brooding sky.

How they must have stared at her, those shaggy giants of men, slouching in a silent circle, their women peering through the barred windows behind them.

GLORIOUS WOMAN

Silky banks of blue-black hair partly above smoldering, ivory-lidded eyes . . . wide, scarlet slash of a mouth burning against the vivid pallor of her cheeks . . . big body rippling beneath her splendid silk . . . never had Hornitos seen such glory, or known such arrogant domination.

"Candelaria"—that's the only name she ever gave—and within a week it was known the length and the breadth of the Mother Lode.

A woman like that buying and running a fandango house— wildest, roughest rendezvous within a hundred miles! But run it she did, and every living soul in the district with it.

Even now, when 85 years have passed, her name is still a byword. The beauty of her—like mystery—and the brutal power.

Fandango women—always, before, they had been nameless things, barred from a decent world by their own shame. But Candelaria—something about her blazed like a flame above the murk she'd chosen for her lot.

Not that she wasn't as bad as the next one, judging by the common standard. Temper of the devil himself! Heaven help any of her girls who tried to double-cross her!

And many a man she threw out with her own two hands, their ringed bauty hard as steel about his whining throat. And yet—there was that other side of her.

Not half a dozen—and amongst that half dozen, no man—ever saw the room where she slept. But it was the old women said, as bare and clean as a nun's white cell, with only a big, black cross beneath a faded picture of the Virgin.

Beside that, a table, one chair, a cot. Then a splendid sinner's body sprawling on a rough, plank cot!

And there was something—even stranger. Twice a year—on some Saint's day particularly dear to those of her own dark blood—she swept her barroom clear of the loafing swine—ordered her girls to scrub paint and powder off their faces—erected in front of the bar a great altar, with pictures and symbols from a secret ghost.

KNEEL IN PRAYER

Then, as the twilight fell, out into the street she'd go, dressed all in black, and round them up. Men, women and children—she'd order them all into line and place herself at the head. So, chanting, they would slowly march toward the fandango hall—enter—and for a long, stilled moment kneel in prayer.

That was all. That one, still space of prayer. After that the altar was put away and—riot. Men shouting, drinking; girls whirling on their twinkling, scarlet heels. With Candelaria herself flaunting it over them all—mouth unsmiling, eyes inscrutable.

Why had she done it? What did it mean to her? Nobody ever knew. Yet even now, though 85 years have passed, you'll find they still speak in Hornitos of "Candelaria's Day." As though she were a saint instead of a—woman. Or was she? Who knows?

But often, hearing some bitter judgment, I stop and think. Think back to that strange, wild woman, with her sin-stained haunt, her convent cell, her altar in front of a bar. You never can tell!

The 'Pep' to Win

By WINIFRED BLACK

The man who comes to take care of the garden sat down in the shade to rest the other day, and, while he was sitting there, he told me such an interesting story.

"Father-in-law came from way down South," said the man. "He had never had a cent and he traveled along on foot. When he got here he went to work for a man in the southern part of the State.

"The man had lots of work to do around the place and father-in-law and father-in-law did the best he could. But the man was always buying new brands of cattle, going into debt and having mortgages and things, and sometimes he couldn't pay father-in-law his wages. What did father-in-law do? Leave in a huff? Not he—he was too smart. He just said, 'Well, give me a calf, then, and I'll call it even.' There were always calves and calves and calves running around.

"So the man he worked for gave him a calf and father-in-law put his own brand on him. In just a very few years father-in-law had quite a few cattle. Finally, one day a man came along after the round-up and offered to buy his brand.

"And he paid him $4000 for it. Well, father-in-law took the $4000 and bought a piece of land and raised some more cattle. Then he bought another piece of land and raised some more cattle, and soon he owned 600 acres of the richest land in California. The mountains and the meadows were full of his cattle, and the home place was full of pigs.

"What became of it all? Oh, when he died, the family kind of disputed about the property among themselves and now they are all trying to scratch along the best they can.

"Now, I suppose father-in-law would have shown more of what the youngsters call 'pep' if he had thrown down his shovel and hoe and walked out after giving the man he worked for a piece of his mind instead of taking the calf and calling it square.

"But somehow, I wonder what father-in-law would say if he could see us all now looking for work, and mighty glad to find it wherever we can pick it up."

The man who takes care of the garden laughed, picked up his tools and went to work.

What's the Matter With Kansas?

(Reprinted from the Salt Lake Tribune.)

About a third of a century ago a collection of charmingly written sketches of pioneering on the middle western plateau—stories of settlers who tried to fence and farm the open spaces between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains—tragedies of failures caused by drouth, grasshoppers, poverty and isolation made its appearance in the bookstores. Its title was a question: "What's the matter with Kansas?"

He has written a lot of delightful fiction since then, but still reverts to the previous question.

In a sequel to that series of hardluck tales he now is inquiring: "What's the matter with the nation?"

* * *

And he attempts to answer by proposing for the presidency of these United States a Kansan who has come into public notice recently through a very efficient and economical administration of state affairs as governor of the Sunflower State.

His name is Alf M. Landon.

* * *

He made his commonwealth an oasis of economy and reduced expenditures in a vast desert of sizzling extravagance and thorny taxation.

His public record is brief and therefore comparatively immune from criticism. His armor is new and free from rust or dents.

Another noted Kansas editor and author, who likewise portrayed the troubles of his fellow citizens in "The Story of a Country Town," published more than a half century ago, has declared Alf Landon to be his choice for president.

Comparing Landon with other historical characters, he says:

"You'll not find him a grandstander like Roosevelt, a backslapper like Harding or a ★ nothing like Hoover, but he'll get things done in that quiet, unobtrusive way of his."

Dismissing every other pretender to leadership in the Republican party with a defiant flourish of his ink-stained weapon, Howe asserts that the future of this republic is bound up with that o. Landon.

What several discardkt aspirants may think of these Kansans may not be printable, but the reading public will concede that one of the editors is white, and will raise its composite glass of clear, cold water to the other gaunt, grizzled, grim and gloryfied in his home state, and say: "Here's Howe."

Study of Our Bodies

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

When scientists get together, there is always talk of glands, and plenty of it!

From reports and experiments one gathers that these mysterious organs, which secrete a substance to be carried to other parts of the body, hold the key to most of the mysteries of life and death.

Edwin C. Hill

Dr. George Crile, speaking at the recent congress of the American College of Surgeons, in San Francisco, told the fascinating story of how, while hunting lions in Africa in 1927, he stumbled upon a means of treating epilepsy, high blood pressure, diabetes, stomach ulcers and nervous debility.

He was attracted by the manner in which a lion could spring from absolute immobility into lightning-swift action. He asked himself why human could not do the same thing and, eventually, he set about finding out.

MEDICAL DISCOVERY

He discovered a lion and found that the king of beasts possessed a huge "adrenal sympathetic system."

That is, the lion had a complexity of nerves and ganglia associated with the adrenal glands, those two small organs near the kidneys.

The ancients, as far back as the great Hippocrates, had the idea that there were forces in the body, apart from the brain, which reacted to human emotions.

They believed that anger originated in the stomach, and it remained for modern endocrinologists to discover the reaction of the adrenal glands to fright, stress and anger.

At such time it is the overexcretion from these glands that really makes one "sick of fright" or "sick of anger."

Dr. Crile, a great dabbler in glands, earlier this year told the Medical Society of New Jersey that an overactive adrenal gland makes the thyroid gland overactive, and vice versa, causing, among other things, diseases such as stomach ulcers and diabetes.

Another recent discovery, this by Dr. Edward C. Kendall of the Mayo Clinic, is that the suprarenal cortex, one of the endocrine glands above the kidneys, is the salt regulator of the human body. Dr. Kendall, like thousands of other chemists and doctors, has been chasing hormones for years.

The hormones are the chemical substance which the glands send into the blood stream. That from the suprarenal glands is known as cortin and has been extracted from slaughtered food animals.

In many cases it relieved Addison's disease, a fatal malady which attacks the nerves and ends in a death coma. The doctors learned that dogs could be kept alive by cortin after their suprarenal glands had been removed.

But there were times when cortin failed; and Dr. Kendall's new discovery is believed to hold the reason for these failures. The salt had gone out with the suprarenal glands.

As with everything else, too much gland secretion is as bad as too little. The king of all glands is the pituary, which lies on the floor of the brain and which appears to control the other glands in the body.

The pituary has a lot to do with growth. A giant has an overactive pituary, while that of a dwarf is inactive.

The fatigue, lack of power of concentration and irritability which come to most humans as they pass middle age is due either to deficient or excessive thyroid secretion.

The first important chemical compound obtained from the glands was adrenalin, which, discovered back around 1900, was a great boon to surgery in that it prevented bleeding. The layman probably knows it better as the drug which at times can revive a lifeless heart.

Gland transplanting, especially those of the sex glands, became quite a fad in Europe just after the war, and developed into quite a racket for quacks.

There is no need for transplanting glands when the glandular extract can be injected by a needle. And neither the glands nor the extract can accomplish their purpose unless the body is responsive.

In the glands, doctors are convinced, are to be found the secret of most of our bodily scourges, even to cancer. But in knowledge of these you and I are yet gotten beyond the kindergarten.

Dear Child Dept.:

Is it alright with the U. S. Government if I spank my little boy Wilbur, aged 7? I hope so, because I just finished doing it.

The way it happened, my wife caught Wilbur in the ice-box between meals. He had raspberry jam all over his new shirt that the government bought him, so Mabel says to me:

I done my duty on the back porch, and Wilbur yelped so loud that our next door neighbor come out and says:

"Hey!" he says to me, "have you got a federal license to spank that brat of yours?"

"No," I says, "but I don't need no license because I am his father, I hope."

"Well, you won't be his father much longer," says my neighbor. "The New Deal is going to be a papa to him and you both. Just wait till Mr. Roosevelt finishes with our Constitution, and and you'll see."

I asked my Neighbor what I would see when our Constitution was gone, and he says:—

That worried me, and I says:—

"Good gracious, will I have to write to Wash. D. C. every week when I take a bath?"

"No," says my Neighbor, "because as soon as they get our Constitution fixed up, they will send a Burrocrat to live off of you & tell you all things."

I shouldn't of bit on that one, but I asked my Neighbor what a Burrocrat was.
